Milk Street Firms Close Up, and Clients Fail to Get Their Checks

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien today started an investigation of Wellington & Co., dealers in stocks and bonds at No. 101 Milk street.

The inquiry is a sequel to numerous complaints filed with the district attorney by clients of the company who have invested thousands of dollars and have been unable to obtain checks to settle their accounts.

The doors of the Wellington Company were closed today at the suggestion of Attorney John H. Devine, counsel for the company. Mr. Devine said he made the suggestion as the result of many clients protesting to him that they were unable to receive their checks.

Several hundred investors are bit by the firm's failure to continue business.

Mr. Devine further explained that his action was taken pendi e consultation with Joseph Konweiser, in whose name Wellington & Co. operated. The attorney said that he had not seen Mr. Konweiser for several days. He received a telegram from his yesterday, dated in Albany, N.

The Conejos foundered during a violent gale, 150 miles off Batum.

Many ships have been driven ashore by the storm which swept the eastern part of the Black Sea.

JAIL CABOT AS PEACE DISTURBER

Back Bay Youth Held in $500 After Trying to Pick Fight in Randolph, N. H.

Norman Cabot, former Harvard student and son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Brooks Cabot of No. 447 Marlboro street, Back Bay, is under arrest at Randolph, N. H., charged with disturbing the peace.

Informed of her son's predicament Cabot's mother today expressed her intentions of letting the boy "fight it out for himself."

According to advices from Randolph, young Cabot has been a disturbing element in the community off and on for several years.

LOOKING FOR FIGHT.

Last Summer he had a number of fights. He returned to Randolph last week to spend the Christmas holidays and again got into trouble. According to Officer V. D. Low, who is also a member of the Randolph Board of Selectmen, Cabot insisted on fighting with Rayner Reed, a husky carpenter.

Reed refused to fight and Cabot is alleged to have followed him about town for a week. Finally Officer Lowe arrested him. According to Lowe, Cabot resisted arrest and became abusive. He was arraigned and held in $500 bonds for trial Monday.

Cabot was a member of the Harvard class of 1923, but failed in his examinations. He has worked about Randolph on the railroad and in mills. He does not have to work as he receives a substantial allowance from his parents weekly.

SUMMER AT DUBLIN.

"Norman has had quite a bit of trouble in Randolph" said his mother today. "He is high-strung and nervous. I have never interfered as I thought it would do him good to fight it out and get it out of his system. I don't think his incarceration will do him any harm."

Cabot's father is out of town as it appeared that a member of the famous Cabot family is to "week end" in jail.

MUTINY ON LOST AIRSHIP DIXMUDE, SEEN IN COMMANDER'S DEATH

THINK CREW IN FEAR OF DISASTER

the sky out at sea on the morning of December 26. They observed this light at 2:30 o'clock, and it was found that Lieutenant Grenadan's watch had stopped at just that hour.

Paris, Dec. 29 (Universal Cable). — Mystery still surrounds the fate of the dirigible Dixmude.

The only evidence of the tragedy accompanying the loss of the giant Dixmude, which sailed on her fatal voyage ten days ago, was the finding of the body of her commander, Lieutenant du Plessis de Grenedan, off the coast of Sicily by Italian fishermen.

So perplexing is the situation that it is rumored today that, scenting the end of the Dixmude, the crew mutinied and threw their commander overboard.

It is pointed out that when the body was found it bore evidence of having been in the water for at least three days.

That would mean that either the Dixmude was lost in the tempest of Saturday night when, according to the wireless received, she should have been over the Algerian desert, or that the captain was thrown overboard, since it is manifestly absurd that the commander of the ship should have jumped overboard in the face of peril, especially as De Grenedan was known as one of the most fearless officers of the air service.

Search of the clothing of the dead air officer failed to reveal any documents which would throw light upon the tragic loss of the great dirigible.

The body was fully clothed except for the coat. The face was mutilated, which may have resulted from impact with the water. There were no bruises upon the body, which partly discredits the belief reported from Paris that the crew may have mutinied, seized the commander and thrown his body overboard.

Fishermen living at Sciacca, off which port the body was picked up, said the storm over the Mediterranean last Friday and Saturday was one of extreme violence.

They believe the airship could not have weathered such a gale.

The Dixmude carried a number of carrier pigeons for release in event the wireless failed. None has been found.

It had been reported that the wife of Sergeant Hamon, a member of the crew, received a telegram from her husband stating that he had been rescued on the coast of Tripoli.

GIVE NO HOPE.

No other information was given out at midnight the Ministry of Marine announced that no such telegram had been received, the report being due to a misunderstanding.

At that time, too, the ministry announced that it was ready to admit that the Dixmude had fallen into the Mediterranean. The body of Lieutenant De Grenedan was found by the nets of Italian fishermen six miles off the coast of Sicily near Selenca.

Loss of the Dixmude was discussed at a Cabinet meeting at noon. Upon emerging, Minister of Marine Painlevé made the following statement:

"There has been absolutely no news regarding the loss of the Dixmude since yesterday afternoon. We are now waiting for a report from the warship Mulhouse, which is cruising in the Mediterranean near the spot where Lieutenant Grenedan's body was found."

Unlimited latitude in the Mediterranean and deserted coasts of Tunis, Algiers, Tripoli and Sicily are being systematically searched in the hope of finding survivors, who may have saved their lives by jumping overboard in the calmer waters.

But hope is now virtually abandoned that any of the passengers or crew of the Dixmude will be found alive.

Mme. Duplessis de Grenedan, wife of the commander of the ill-fated ship, who lives at Toulon, is about to become a mother. She has not been informed of her husband's death.

Messages were received today by President Millerand and Premier Poincare from King George of England, expressing sympathy over the loss of the Dixmude.

The grain ship Ingomen was carried aground.

The Russian steamship Sebastopol was blown ashore on the Bulgarian coast. A number of other vessels were stranded in the same region.

London, Dec. 29.—The United States Shipping Board in London has heard nothing of its steamship, the Conejos, since its Constantinople agent relayed an S. O. S., saying that the vessel was sinking.

Officials here fear the Canajos has foundered, inasmuch as ships sent to her assistance report no trace even of her lifeboats.

The Shipping Board steamer Clontarf is scouring the Black Sea in the hope of picking up the Conejos' captain and crew.

The Conejos, which registered 5,110 tons, was proceeding from Poti, north of Batum, for New York with a cargo of Manganese ore, valued at $250,000.

London, Dec. 29.—The Italian merchant ship Leonae foundered at sea in a storm after a collision with another vessel, according to a dispatch from Constantinople. The dispatch gave no details as to loss of life.

London, Dec. 29.—The British steamship Peconic was reported missing today. Attempts to communicate with her by wireless failed.

Crew Rescued From Wrecked British Ship

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 29.—The crew of the British schooner Carina wrecked and sinking off the coast of Newfoundland has been rescued by the British steamer Cairnmorna, according to messages relayed from the Cape Race wireless station to the department of marines and fisheries.

The Carina, en route from St. John's to Pernambuco, was discovered in distress about 150 miles off the coast, the wireless reports said. Her three masts had been blown away and she was waterlogged. When rescued her crew was near exhaustion from work at the pumps.

The Cairnmorna's destination is Portland, Me., and she probably will take the Carina's crew to that port.

Telegraphic and telephonic communication between Cape Breton island and the mainland has been cut as a result of the heavy snows of last night. The snowfall continued today.

Y., stating he expected to be in Boston today.

The offices of T. J. Day & Co., investment bankers at the same address, were closed today also. This house was operated in Keuweiser's name. The offices were taken possession of last night by William J. Burns, superintendent of the building, because of non-payment of rent, which was due in advance December 1.

About fifteen employes of the Wellington Company arrived at the offices today seeking their week's pay. Together with several clients they waited in vain for the arrival of Keuweiser or anybody authorized to pay out money.

CLIENTS FILE COMPLAINTS

Wellington & Co. made a specialty of big board securities, their customers comprising mostly Armenians, Greeks and Italians. It had branch offices in Haverhill, Lynn and Fitchburg. These branch offices were closed today.

The company is declared to have done a large business. There is a report that one client, an Armenian, has an account involving $12,000.

The first indication of trouble was when customers, desiring to settle their accounts, were informed they would have to await the return of Keuweiser, the only person with power to sign the checks. This explanation satisfied creditors for two weeks, and on the continued non-appearance of Keuweiser complaints were lodged with the district attorney.

Mr. Devine ventured the opinion that a rising market, necessitating large outlays on customers' profits, may have had something to do with the difficulties of the Wellington company and the Day house. It was reported that Wellington & Company were called upon to pay out about $100,000 in the last two weeks as a result of the rising market.

Keuweiser acquired the Wellington Company business about a year ago and later took over the Day house which was formerly located at No. 61 Devonshire street for a number of years.

Keuweiser occupied an apartment at No. 1444 Commonwealth avenue up to Wednesday night when he told the janitor he was going away for a month. The apartment has been sublet.

SAM SLATER IN NEW FIGHT FOR DIVORCE

The report today from Paris that Samuel J. Slater again is seeking in that city a divorce from the Boston milliner he married more than twenty years ago created scarcely a ripple of interest in Boston, where Slater is little more than a memory and where, on the other hand, reports of legal battles between him and Mrs. Slater are an old story.

The Samuel Slater of today, who lives in France, inherited $2,000,000 from the estate of Horatio N. Slater his father, who owned the mills at Webster.

That was many years ago, at a time when $1,000,000 was enough to make any man interesting. His first wife was Enid Hunt, daughter of the famous artist and sister of the young woman who became Horatio N. Slater's second wife.

That, of course, caused some comment, but not nearly so much as "Sam" Slater's second marriage, in 1901, to Alice Maude Spry of Somerville.

It was all quite like something from the story books. In the first place, there was the $2,000,000. In the second place, Alice Maude was a Tremont street milliner; and in the third place they were married in the Little Church Around the Corner.

Slater's first suit for divorce was instituted nearly a dozen years ago, when he accused the girl from Somerville of being overfriendly with an English Lord Something-or-other in Nice. He also complained about a German.

The allegations "Sam" Slater makes against Mrs. "Sam," in his latest attempt to be legally rid of her, are not specified in the dispatch which came today from Paris, but whatever they are, Boston society does not appear to be tremendously interested.

5 ESCAPE BLAZE IN LAWRENCE

Methuen, Dec. 29.—A family of five, scantily clad, were forced to flee in the snow early today when the home of Samuel Masina, No. 6 Maple street, was partially destroyed by fire. The fire, which started from a defective flue, was discovered by Mrs. Mansina when she arose to prepare milk for an infant son. She awakened the husband and together they carried three children from the building.

CLOTHING ON FIRE, MAN SAVES OWN LIFE

By rare presence of mind Nicholas Sarandeueles, thirty-eight, of No. 128 Harrison avenue, saved his own life today. He used gasoline to hurry along a fire, and when his clothing ignited in the resulting explosion, extinguished the flames by rolling around on the floor.

Sarandeueles conducts a small store at No. 82 Kneeland street. When he lighted the stove the fire came in slowly. To speed it up he used some gasoline. He had just turned his back on an explosion of gas and his clothing was ignited. He promptly rolled on the floor and smothered the flames. His hair was weeks and on the continued nonappearance of Keuweiser complaints were lodged with the district attorney.

SEEN BY POLICE.

Frantic appeals by telephone to Holliston brought little or no information. Stimpson was "away from home." No one knew his whereabouts. He had done this sort of thing before. It was said. Dropped out of sight for days at a time without a word to anyone.

The romance began nine weeks ago, when the couple met in Natick.

"Norman had got the license, the ring and the minister and even made me his beneficiary in a new life insurance policy for $1,000," Miss Cram, who is ill in bed from worry, said today.

"He could not have meant to jilt me. We loved each other and the folks like me and mine liked him."

"He went to Boston Friday to buy his wedding suit. He was to call on me in the evening. He didn't show up. The next day I called his mother and learned he had left his home before the night before. He was seen by Chief of Police Holbrook of Holliston that night and another man saw him board a street car for Natick.

"I spent Sunday with his mother and we figured he had met a Somerville friend and was spending his last bachelor days with him, Mother and I were ashamed with the wedding plans.

"All our guests came. The parlor was decked with beautiful flowers. With Mr. Slosser, the minister, we waited until 10 o'clock. Then they went home.

WILL FORGIVE HIM.

"If he returns, I will forgive him. Forgiveness is a matter of the heart, and I love him. I fear he was robbed and perhaps killed on his way to see me. He had his pay in his pocket and he left home without extra clothing of any kind."

The girl's mother, Mrs. Zita Cram, said that Stimpson would have to give a satisfactory explanation of his disappearance, to prove he did not go away of his own free will, in order to win her daughter again.

Edward Stimpson, father of the lost bridegroom, told the girl's uncle that he has not seen his son since last Friday, but knew that Norman was a long ways off and could not be reached.

Stimpson, who held a good position with a local builder and contractor, served in an infantry regiment during the war and was extremely popular here with young persons of his own age.

GIRLS HUNT FOR ROMANCE IN SHACK

Mary Crofton, sweet sixteen, and Julia Corburn, two years younger, wanted the one thing for Christmas they didn't get.

Mary and Julia craved romance. So on Christmas morning, while other girls their ages were glowing with pride over new trinkets, Mary and Julia slipped out into the world to seek the thrills Santa Claus had failed to provide.

They didn't believe in Santa Claus, anyway.

Mary lived at No. 48½ Hampshire street, Cambridge, and Julia at No. 27 Pine street. Their fathers thought them too young to be "running around."

"We'll go away where we can have romance without kill-joy fathers," they agreed.

One of the girls provided a blanket. This and their pretty faces was all the equipment they possessed. Their headquarters in the quest for thrills they established at No. 73 Concord street, Belmont, in an old shack.

The setting was not all that Mary and Julia would have desired, but youth has imagination and the one room with its smoky oil stove and broken down bed became a grand palace. At least there was no fathers about.

Came a gay young Lochinvar to the palace of Mary and Julia. His name is August and he travelled afar from the shack next door. August provided Mary and Julia with sustenance.

Today the Cambridge police charged the palace and arrested Mary and Julia on "stubborn child" charges. The romance popped like a falling Christmas tree ornament.

"Julia got me to go away," said Mary.

"Mary got me to go away," said Julia.

"If you'll behave yourself I'll not use the strap," said Mary's father.

"You'll behave yourself and I'll make no promises," said Julia's father.

COLD, RAIN, SNOW DUE TOMORROW

According to the seions at the Boston Weather Bureau the warm spell which we are now enjoying will break tomorrow or tomorrow night, and the icy wave that is engulfing Northern Vermont and Maine, and sending the thermometer in those districts down below zero, will clutch Boston and vicinity with freezing fingers.

By tomorrow night, it is predicted, Boston should be in the throes of a cold rain or snow storm, and the thermometer registering between 20 and 30. Heavy snow and trolley car service in Maine is reported to be somewhat delayed by deep snow on the tracks.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Temperatures of from 20 to 56 degrees below zero in Canada and Alaska, signalled the belated advance of Winter and today the weather bureau issued cold wave warnings for Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Kentucky.

A storm of marked intensity is scheduled to continue rapidly southeastward. Abnormally cold weather prevails in the wake of the disturbance. It possibly will reach the East by Monday night.

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Central New York was blanketed in a five-inch layer of snow today. Sleighs were out for the first time in some places.

Boy of 10 Vanishes

LAWRENCE DUKESHIRE.
Beverly, Dec. 29.—Lawrence Dukeshire, ten years old, went out to play yesterday morning at 7. He had with him his new Christmas sled and wore a red mackinaw coat and rubber boots. Nothing has been seen of him since.

Lawrence's grandma, Mrs. Harriet Lendell, with whom he lives at No. 45 Cabot street, Beverly, has asked the police to search for him.

HOUSE ON FIRE; DUMB WOMAN SPEAKS

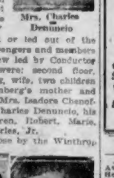
Fourteen persons, including women and children, were rescued from burning in the three-story wooden tenement at No. 30 Woodside avenue, Winthrop, when passengers aboard an Orient Heights-to-Winthrop Narrow Gauge train rushed into the burning structure and led them to safety through smoke-filled hallways.

During the fire Mrs. Sarah Gantzky, 65-year-old mother-in-law of Israel Greenburg, owner of the building, who had not spoken a word for two months, owing to a shock, uttered her first words. She shouted "Fire."

Mrs. Charles Demuncio

Those carried or led out of the building by passengers and members of the train crew led by Conductor "Al" Shorey, were: second floor, Israel Greenberg, wife, two children and Mrs. Greenberg's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Chenofsky; top floor, Charles Demuncio, his wife and children, Robert, Marie, Elmer and Charles, Jr.

The house, close by the Winthrop



Elmer Demuncio Chas Demuncio Jr.
Centre Station, was occupied on the ground floor by the Buick Automobile Company, a tailor shop and a restaurant. The latter place is where the blaze is suspected of having originated.

The Chenofskys, an aged couple, were carried from the house by Patrolmen Butler and Wendell of the Winthrop police.

Leroy Belcher, son of the fire chief, collapsed while running to the fire. He was taken to the Winthrop Community Hospital, suffering it is believed, from a heart affliction.

Lodger Found Dead

Louis H. Pappas, thirty-five, a lodger on Lawrence street, South End, was found dead in his room today by his landlady, Elizabeth Adams. Assistant Medical Examiner Watters was unable to determine the cause of death.

FREIGHT WRECK TIES UP SOUTH SHORE LINES

A falling plank wrecked a fast freight of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad early today under the Washington street bridge, Braintree, causing all inbound traffic from the Cape, Brockton, Campello and Braintree to be delayed for three hours.

Sixteen of the twenty cars drawn by a locomotive had passed under the bridge when the plank, a heavy one, fell from the upper part of the bridge, and landed squarely across the tracks. The seventeenth car was thrown high into the air by the impact, but the pins which fastened the cars to the train held and the heavily laden car was jerked along for 150 feet, bumping heavily against the stonework supporting the bridge and damaging it considerably.

The bumping of the car against the low stone ceiling could be heard for many blocks, and it was feared at first that the workmen's train, which follows the early morning fast freight by about three minutes, had been wrecked.

The derailed car tore away a section of the inbound express rail, causing all express trains from Brockton to be delayed for three hours, as well as the many locals from Braintree and Scituate.

A wrecking crew was rushed to the scene and began their work of clearing the tracks. Service was nearly normal again by 8 a. m.

A Lively Rum Demon
Livermore Says Coolidge We Work, Not Knowing Why?
Some Wonders of Science

Current Events
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company.

THE demon rum may be down, but he is not completely out. On Christmas he sent 107 of his friends to one hospital; others went to bed at home. In 1923 875 died of bootleg liquor. Tens of thousands have shortened their lives. Poisoned kidneys among men and women begin yielding a rich undertakers' harvest.

New Jersey demands three per cent. beer. But prohibition will prevent that for several years, at least.

MR. LIVERMORE, who "makes a market" for other people's stocks, by buying and selling more stock than there is, knows all about stock gambling, politely called speculation.

COOLIDGE will be elected, he says, and there will be a big upward swing in all sound stocks.

"COOLIDGE will be elected," that's the cry, in the East, and some other parts. The farmer is the question mark. Mr. Coolidge's message said the farmer must work out his own salvation. McAdoo's results at the Illinois primaries will be enlightening.

WOODROW WILSON, 67 years old yesterday, predicts Democratic victory. It is predicted that he will announce his opposition to a bonus for soldiers. If he does, that will make it easier for Coolidge.

WE BUILD, yet not knowing for what or whom we build. Tiny creatures, piling up coral reefs below the waters of the South Seas, little dreamed that palms would grow, brown savages dance, and eat each other, on those island reefs, or that white men would enslave the brown men and put them to digging phosphate, or making copra.

ALEXANDER GUSTAVE EIFFEL, who died yesterday, built for the Paris Exhibition of 1889 the Eiffel Tower, man's highest structure, 1,000 feet high. It's only a toy besides a fair-sized mountain. But being the biggest, all the world knows of it.

Little he imagined, when building it, that radio stations would send messages across the oceans, from that Tower, or that Prussian flying machines would come trying to dynamite it.

Still less could he imagine the structures to be built by man in future that will make our mountains seem small, 50 miles high, for astronomical observation, free of atmospheric dust and moisture, where scientists will work, breathing air pumped from below.

THE Association for the Advancement of Science calls the automobile the greatest single contributor to the nation's ethical and material progress. It enables a man to live three lives in one, increases the farmers' production, saving his time; increases human happiness, everywhere.

Bankers that worry about automobile financing, take notice. An investment in a better race is a sound investment.

A DOVE that had reached the egg-laying stage was changed from female to male by a tuberculosis infection. The Carnegie Foundation proves that. Scientists think that sex will be soon controlled, even changed, among human beings. Luckily Mother Nature had charge of that. Many foolish fathers and fond wives would have all boys.

SIR ALMOTH WRIGHT fights disease thus: He takes blood from a well man, inoculates it with vaccine, puts it in a sick man's veins. Blood thus treated clears out the poison of septicaemia, most deadly. That's one scientific triumph.

LENSES, made from insects' eyes, are used to take photographs and prove the marvelous superiority of insect sight. Our eyes are imperfect, but can be improved. When we're all civilized and all scientists, one eye will specialize on the microscope, the other on telescopic work, both united on normal sight.

DR. McMURRICH, of Toronto University, tells the 2,000 assembled scientists, "Revolution is the stimulus of all modern science; it has become much stronger since Darwin's day. It seems incredible that man, as a reasoning animal, should presume to doubt its veracity." But men that doubt or deny scientific fact, clearly proved, are no reasoning animals. They are superstitious animals, that belittle their own religious beliefs and teachings by confessing that they cannot face facts.

SCIENTISTS tell you that the parental instinct is 20,000,000 years old, the lowest animal forms of those ancient times possessing man's devotion to offspring, in a lesser degree.

Paternal affection is older than that. It's as old as the first lifebearing planet in this universe, and Heaven only knows how old that is, if, indeed, there was a "first" planet.

NATURE works everywhere under the same laws, at the North Pole, at the Equator, here, or a trillion miles off in space. She works through attraction, mechanical, material attraction, expressed in Newton's formula, "directly as mass," etc., and spiritual attraction as when a mother hen, with head lowered and feathers upstanding, defies a yoke of oxen, coming too near her brood.

ATTRACTION is nature's power. We can be relied on to do what we want to do, so she makes us want to do what she wants done. Here are three attractions. The instinct of self-preservation keeps us here often when we'd be better off out of the world. The instinct of reproduction supplies more of us to carry on the "plan" whatever it may be. And ambition, the strange impulse that makes us work, fight, and starve, if necessary, to do better than somebody else is the attraction that supplies progress and on we go, ingeniously wound up, and set running, while we think we do it all ourselves.

"Sir," said Dr. Johnson, "we know that the will is free, and that's an end of it." But do we know it? That 70 foot Dinosaur watched over her eggs 10,000,000 years ago, as her cousin, the Wren, does today, each thinking herself a free agent. There is no freedom, but there is law, which is better. And there is work within the law that rewards the workers.

HELEN CLAY FRICK

BIG LOSS IN PROPERTY OF H. C. FRICK

Pittsburgh, Dec. 23.—Helen Clay Frick, Pittsburgh steel heiress, starts the New Year $4,400,000 richer than she was one year ago.

Others members of the late steel master's immediate family also contemplate the dawn of 1924 with greatly fattened bank accounts for during the past twelve months, $14,000,000 from the estate was distributed among the widow and children.

The figures are contained in a report filed in the Orphans' Court by the executors of the estate.

The authorities of Princeton and Harvard Universities, however, have no reason to regard the filing of the report with such complacency as have members of the family.

The estate shrunk to such an extent that the institutions will receive less than half the amounts it was at first believed would accrue from the bequests of the steel baron.

Of the $16,000,000 distributed to the family, the widow, Adelaide H. C. Frick received $4,000,000, and the daughter Helen Clay Frick, $4,000,000. A son, Childs Frick, was paid $2,000,000, and Frances Dale Frick received $2,000,000.

The estate, originally estimated at $100,000,000, has shrunk to $80,000,000, due to decline in the value of securities. About $10,000,000 has been paid in Federal and State taxes, while under the provisions of the will, all specific bequests must be paid before the residuary estate, in which the institutions will participate, is distributed.

Bequests which it was at first believed would amount to $5,000,000 for Princeton and $2,000,000 for Harvard, will shrink to $2,000,000 for the former and less than a million for the latter.

There remains $34,095,824 in the hands of the executor for distribution.

TWO FIRE-BOMB SUSPECTS HELD

Sullivan Barbetti, forty-six years old, of No. 458 Shawmut avenue, South End, and William F. Rust, twenty-nine, of No. 2809 Washington street, were before Judge Logan in South Boston court today, charged with arson. The case was continued to January 5. Their arrest followed finding of a time-clock bomb in a mass of oil-saturated tinder, at a fire in the hallway at No. 97 P street, South Boston. State officials term the bomb the "cleverest device they have ever seen."

Hiram Johnson, Republican presidential candidate of California also filed his acceptance and was placed in the Independent column on the ballot.

SCREW DRIVER DEATH MYSTERY

Lieut. Wood Is Treated Like King

WINTHROP "SUICIDE" MYSTERY

Postal Man Declared to Have Used Hammer and Screw-Driver to Kill Self

Truth concerning t... death of William J. Downes, popular Winthrop sportsman and post-office attache, may never be known.

Downes was found dying at the foot of his bed last night, a small screw driver driven into his scalp to the handle.

A hammer, believed to have been used to drive the death implement into his skull, was lying at his side.

Investigators agreed today that the case involves either a baffling murder mystery or a most peculiar suicide.

Associate Medical Examiner Watters has not yet made his report. He says: "If the case is one of suicide, it is a very strange suicide."

Chief of Police McNeil of the Winthrop police is convinced that Downes took his own life. Chief McNeil reconstructed his version of the affair for the Boston American today.

DESCRIBES "SUICIDE."

"When Dorothy Downes (the dead man's daughter) went home at 5:30 last night the house was locked from the inside," said Chief McNeil.

"The implements that brought death to Downes were usually kept in a small tool cabinet in the kitchen. Downes was very fussy about his implements. He kept the cabinet arranged just so. No other tools were disturbed.

"There is a wound just back of the ear that penetrated the scalp. I believe that Downes held the screw driver to his head and tried to drive it in with the palm of his hand. It was this wound that caused all the bleeding.

"After this wound was inflicted Downes walked from his bed to the bathroom and back again. This is clearly shown by two trails of blood. The bed is covered with blood. The curtains near the head of the bed are blood-stained.

TOOK OFF SHOES.

"Returning from the bathroom, Downes sat on the bed, near the foot, and removed his shoes. This is apparent for, while they were placed under the edge of the bed, they are blood-stained.

"Then Downes apparently felt about with the point of the screw driver for a vulnerable spot in his skull. This is indicated by several little scratches.

"Finally Downes selected a spot about one and one-half inches in back of his right ear and held the point of the screw driver to it with his left hand. With the hammer in his right hand he drove the screw driver in. This, which brought death, did not bleed as the screw driver plugged up the wound."

Chief McNeil points out as a possible motive that Downes had been brooding over his health for two months. He was an active, jolly man and loved to dance.

HAD CONSULTED DOCTOR

Two months ago he went to a doctor ailing and found he was suffering from hernia. He had once dropped to the floor of the postoffice in a faint while working.

His physician who had attended Downes the last nine years, said today he believed Downes killed himself because of mental and physical breakdown. Downes' condition became so serious that for three weeks preceding his death, Dr. Fowler watched over him, not only at his home, but also at his work in the Winthrop post-office.

He suffered from ailments that preyed upon his mind to such a degree that triple bromides were necessary for him to sleep during the fortnight preceding his death.

For nearly thirty-five years Downes had been a trusted and honored employe of the Post Office Department. He served at the main office in Boston as a mail clerk for eighteen years before his transfer sixteen years ago to Winthrop. There his duties were those of finance clerk.

Downes' accounts and records at the Post Office, Postmaster Belcher said, are O. K. in every respect.

SHERIFF DEFIED AS GIRLS RENEW JAIL RIOTING

Delaware, O., Dec. 29.—Disorder among the inmates at the Girls' Industrial School near here, during which ten girls escaped last night, continued unabated today despite the presence of Sheriff Fred Harter and a force of deputies.

Rioting continued in almost every cottage at the school, while the assembly hall, where fifty insurgents were on guard, was described as an "inferno." The girls continued to shout hysterically, tear their clothes and wreck furniture.

Ten of the mutinous girls who escaped are still at large. More than 100 girls joined the rioting, during which windows were broken in the school buildings.

Several of the girls were cut by broken glass and others were injured when they fell in the darkness.

The trouble, brewing for several days, attaches said, as a result of the girls learning that corporal punishment at the school had been banned by orders of the welfare department, culminated in Cottage No. 5, which is reserved for forty-five incorrigible girls.

Sheriff Harter of Delaware County, was asked for aid and responded with several deputies and Delaware police. These officers with the assistance of male employes and nearby farmers rounded up all but ten of the girls.

They were placed under guard in the Assembly Hall, and strains of piano music soon started them to dancing. Officials said it was their intention to keep them dancing until they were too tired to cause any more trouble.

$1,000,000 FOR MORE PHONES

Worcester, Dec. 29.—The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company will add 27,000 miles of conductor wire in Central Massachusetts in 1924, enough to encircle the globe and leave enough to lap over two thirds across the American continent. Over all these miles people will be talking a year from now. Nearly one half of it will be used in extending the city's local service. The rest will be for improved suburban and toll service.

The cost of the wire work will be upward of $500,000. In addition very large improvements will be made to switchboards, batteries and the like.

The grand total of money to be expended on improvements has not been definitely determined, but it is estimated it will be in excess of $1,000,000.

BANDS PLAY ANTHEM IN HIS HONOR

High Tributes Paid General's Son as He Enters Cabarets in Philippines

By I. S. SAYFORD

Washington, Dec. 29 (Universal Wire).—Manila orchestras stop dead, dancing ceases, the musicians strike up the "Star-Spangled Banner," when Second Lieutenant Osborne Wood enters. The public attention he accepts is not unlike the homage usually exacted by a royal prince.

Speaker Manuel Roxas of the Philippines House of Representatives, who now is in Washington, in a formal interview with Universal Service, so described the position accorded by Second Lieutenant Osborne Wood in the life of Manila. He added:

ALL PAY HOMAGE.

"I think Osborne Wood is a very wealthy man. I am not in a position at this moment to say anything about the source of his sudden rise to fortune. Second Lieutenant Wood is quite an important man in the Philippines, being the son of Governor-General Leonard Wood.

"He is so important that when he goes to a public place, such as a cabaret, the American National Anthem is played as he enters, while everyone in the hall must stop dancing and stand at attention as he passes along."

Senor Roxas is one of the most important witnesses likely to be summoned before Congress in the impending hearings under the Frost resolution for investigation of General Wood's administration in the Islands. The Philippines Speaker, in the meantime, is obligated not to discuss publicly certain matters with which his public and private life in Manila is said to be familiar.

REGAL ISLAND LIFE.

But statements were obtained from Filipino former residents of Manila who now are stopping in Washington. Those statements, here quoted, are upon authority too intimate to be questioned. They mirror the regal island life of the twenty-six year-old sub-lieutenant, whose lately revealed Wall Street speculations, abruptly discontinued by cabled order of the Secretary of War to the young man's father, are estimated to have given him winnings of from $750,000 to $2,500,000.

Quite soon after the arrival of the Woods in Manila, in October of 1921, the Washington Filipinos relate, Osborne Wood began spending money spectacularly. The night life of the city took notice first. A Filipino official with whom he liked to play club poker was only one of several who wondered aloud at the lieutenant's light passion for throwing away money.

HAS FIVE AUTOS.

Two hundred and eighty kilometers by motor-road from Manila is Baguio, the capital's most fashionable resort. One or another, or several of Osborne Wood's fleet of five splendid automobiles, say the Washington Filipinos, were frequently parked there. It was not uncommon for the sub-lieutenant-speculator to take an entire floor of the expensive Baguio Hotel for a party given by himself. This was the life!

Mandaloyon has a dreamy, tropical lilt on the tongue. It is a bit of a gem of an island in the residential environs of Manila. Twenty-five acres of South Sea gardens, surrounding an old palace of the Spanish days, Osborne Wood bought it, say the Washington Filipinos, and when he had finished the remodeling the bill was $150,000.

REVEAL CASKET OF KING TUT'S RICH GEMS

Luxor, Egypt, Dec. 29 (A.P.)—With the removal of the roof of the great canopy over the sarcophagus of Pharaoh Tutenkhamun, the next operation confronting the excavators is the dismantling of the sides of the outer shrine. This will conclude the preliminary work of this season and Howard Carter's men will then enter upon fresh discoveries.

Hopes are high that the second casket, which the correspondent is assured has never been opened, will contain one of those bewilderingly rich and beautiful finds of royal jewelry with which the records of Egyptology are starred.

The exquisite golden crowns, necklaces, bracelets, mirrors and daggers belonging to the Princesses of the twelfth dynasty, known as "The Treasure of Dahshur," which are now in the Cairo Museum, show what heights of artistry the goldsmiths of that most flourishing era of ancient Egyptian history were capable of attaining.

JEWISH WOMEN KILLED BY BOMB

Budapest, Dec. 29.—A bomb was hurled among the crowded dancers at a Jewish women's charity ball in Csongrus, Southern Hungary, killing two women and wounding fifty. The bombers are suspected of being members of the anti-Semitic "Awakening Magyars' Association."

In the panic that resulted many persons were trampled and injured. The town has no hospital and few doctors and the condition of the wounded has become pathetic. It is impossible to send aid from the outside as the railroads are blocked with snow.

SHIFT BERMAN SUIT TO SUPREME COURT

Justice De Courcy in Supreme Court today allowed a motion to transfer from the Superior Court to the Supreme Court the $50,000 suit of Myer Berman, former proprietor of the old Higgins House, against Daniel H. Coakley. The transfer was made with the consent of attorneys for both sides when Judge Waitt, who heard the case, was elevated to the Supreme bench.

ENVOY OF GERMANY REBUFFED

Wife of Belgian Envoy Objects to Him as an Escort at White House Dinner

Washington, Dec. 29 (I.N.S.)—Tongues were wagging in diplomatic circles here today over an incident in connection with recent diplomatic dinner at the White House which was attended by the entire diplomatic corps—the ambassadors and ministers of some 42 countries.

On such occasions it is customary for the White House staff to arrange the seating of the guests, according to rank and position and each diplomat escorts the wife of one of his colleagues to the State dining room.

On this occasion Dr. Otto Von Wiedfeldt, the German ambassador was assigned with Baroness de Cartier de Marchienne, wife of the Belgian ambassador. The baroness is an American, the former Mrs. Hamilton Wilkes Carter of New York. She objected so strenuously to the seating arrangement that flustered White House attaches were forced to make a realignment and instead of the baroness, the German ambassador escorted in Mme. Hanihara, wife of the Japanese ambassador.

The incident has created a sensation in diplomatic circles of the capital. In normal times, according to the dowagers, this might have been magnified into an international incident, but outside of providing a choice morsel of tea table conversation around the embassies and legations, it seemed today that nothing would come of it.

PARIS FLOOD SWEEPS WINE DOWN SEINE

Paris, Dec. 29.—A thousand kegs and barrels of wine were floating down the Seine today, swept from the Bercy warehouses in eastern Paris by the swollen river. The Seine has been rising steadily for the last four days. It is overflowing its banks and the wharves in some districts, and more serious damage is feared as it is predicted the tide will not be stemmed until January 2. St. Louis Island, in the centre of Paris, is practically under water.

CHINA CONSIDERS APPEAL TO WORLD

Peking, Dec. 29 (I.N.S.).—A second world conference in Washington to consider China's plight is being considered as a result of the situation now faced by the Peking government, it was reported today. The gold franc dispute with France and the Canton customs seizure by Sun Yat Sen are so deadlocked that no solution is in sight. It is possible that China will ask that the dispute with France be referred to the Hague Tribunal for decision.

MAN AND 2 GIRLS HELD FOR BAD CHECKS

Fall River, Dec. 29.—Frank T. Whitley of Cambridge, Anna Panachia, and Lucille Costa, of Boston, sought by police of a dozen cities, were arrested in the railroad station here and charged with passing worthless checks. They are wanted for passing checks on three Lynn stores, and today Inspector William H. Kane of the Lynn police left for Fall River for the trio.

FREIGHT TRAFFIC IN 1923 HIGHEST EVER

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Freight traffic handled by railroads in the United States was 27 per cent. higher in 1923 than in 1922 and five per cent. greater than in 1926, the previous record year, according to a statement issued here today by C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central Railroad.

COOLIDGES CRUISE DOWN POTOMAC

DODGES DOCTOR TO MEET GAY DANCER

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

FOR the first time in fifteen years of elusive, bloodless interviewing with the great and the near-great of the American drama, meeting difficulties with fortitude and finesse, frequently toasting your toes in a corridor while a rival chatted smugly with your popular subject and overstretched himself into your carefully appointed time—after all this, and more, it was something of a novelty to cross swords, or scalpels in rivalry with a family physician. And please allow it sink in deeply, catching up with Ada-May of Mr. Savage's "Lollipop" family is no decent indoor exercise when a solemn man of medicine holds up a protesting finger and warns his pretty patient against using her voice for anything except purely professional duties. Being interviewed, it appears, is overwhelmingly non-essential.

SLIPPING PAST THE FAMILY PHYSICIAN GIVES PERSISTENT CALLER REAL THRILL

HOWEVER, by a little trickery we edged past the faithful guardian and came face to face with Ada-May—caught her right between two hearty coughs and a prolonged wheeze. It was explained, with a show of bitterness, that Ada-May's reward for an abstemious Christmas was a pair of swollen tonsils and a ruinous cold in the head. Nothing artistic in that combination, you were reminded. Mr. Savage's newest featured player had missed by inches the horror of being laid up for repairs. "Art has taken a staggering blow this week," mourned Ada-May—"laid almost flat by a mixture of cruel New England germs that swarmed upon us in the holiday rush. We have had two victims, Zelda Sears sharing with me the misery that comes from too much exposure in an unfriendly climate. We call ourselves the laryngitis twins, Ada-May and Zelda, stars of the roaring farce, 'Cough and Sneeze.' I can joke about it now because we're headed back to normalcy, but it isn't so awfully funny when you have to dance, sing, turn cartwheels and make people laugh when you feel that if life really was as lovely as it is painted an ambulance should back up to the theatre and cart you away to peace and rest."

Little Ada-May mourns the loss of a good family name.

THEN you remembered that Ada-May is not exactly the young woman's name, that the hyphen is something new and that once she danced into the hearts of playgoers as Ada Mae Weeks. It was not Ada May's idea that the Weeks of her euphonious name should be unhinged and laid away for future reference. She was emphatic on that point. "Why," she exclaimed, "I feel almost as if I had deserved my family. But I was persuaded that there might be advantages in being known by a nickname. I haven't yet been won over to the idea, but Miss Sears and Mr. Savage have great faith in the plan. The hyphen is inserted, I suppose, as something in the nature of a solace for the loss of the Weeks, but it doesn't strike me that way at all. If there is anything that makes me furious it is to have someone call me Miss May and careless printers, having carefully neglected to use the hyphen, have stirred me to deep indignation. Every time I see Ada-May without the hyphen I begin to work up a fine assortment of hate for printers. So please call me Ada-May to my face and don't at your peril, forget the hyphen. That, at least, gives the name a suggestion of being a single word and something of a nickname. But I mourn for the departed Weeks. Don't you think it is a good name?" You bet we do.

BURNING AMBITION IS NOT EASILY CHOKED TO DEATH

IF there is any definite, safe working rule that can be followed for choking to death an artistic ambition, it has not been given to the world. You may take Kay Laurel's word for this—and you may also give due attention to her deeds. When Miss Laurel first burst into public gaze she sat at the top of a big heap of Flo Ziegfeld's best scenery, wearing very few clothes and waving an American flag. She was the prize beauty of the Follies, with nothing more serious on her mind than to drape herself into various ensembles and reveal to a staring world that nature had, for once, done a darned good job. She radiated beauty and excited adoration the entire distance from a pink toe to the softest brown hair that ever wore a permanent wave or shook a saucy curl at a friend in the first row of the paying side of the theatre. That was Kay Laurel of the Follies. Please meet Miss Laurel today, and have a good, honest look at the hardest working ambition in this or any other dramatic season. She is the leading woman of "Whispering Wires," the hard fisted melodrama at the Plymouth.

"THE hardest thing in the world to live down," explained Miss Laurel, after an angry scene with an unruly stage detective, "is a reputation for being a beauty. Once you are staged as a Follies beauty you've got a stern uphill fight if you want to make any artistic progress in the theatre. I believe the public enjoys what it sees more than what it hears. Why, when I read your review of 'Whispering Wires' I fairly boiled, for you followed the old and what I think is a wicked rule. Not one word did you write about my acting, but only that here was a former Follies beauty who still knew how to look beautiful. I really ought to hate you. I would much rather read something like this: 'Kay Laurel, as Doris Stockbridge, was not at all good looking but she gave a wonderful performance.' That would give me a thrill—a happy exhilaration. But a Follies beauty must battle her way to artistic achievement with everybody thinking of her only as a creature of fair face and alluring figure—with everybody pulling against her or, at least, insisting upon her doing double duty to prove that she is an artist and not just something to pour into a pair of tights."

THERE was a grain of reason in Miss Laurel's complaint, because no matter how bravely you tried you couldn't forget how gorgeous she was in the old Follies setting. But she knew her own mind. "Climbing hasn't been so easy," she went on, "but I was born, with an ambition for the dramatic stage—as far back as I can remember I always thought of myself as a dramatic star. When I left the Follies to study technique and toil in stock, I threw away a good figure and beauty for an ambition—and I made the plunge for less money than Mr. Ziegfeld was willing and anxious to pay for my services. But the Follies was a stepping stone and a very satisfactory one, for I was able to save enough to give myself three years of dramatic study and voice culture in Paris and turn my talents to stock companies for an entire year, where the pay was pitifully small. But I worked in 52 different plays, under good directors, gathering an experience that made it possible for me to come into 'Whispering Wires.'"

AND she is going on—says so in plain words. "I am going to stick to dramatic roles until I am forgotten as a beauty and known as an artist. And please don't ever again refer to me as a beauty—if you do, something terrible will happen." You promised, but made a mental reservation.

Craven Turns Star For Home Folk

John Golden announces for Frank Craven that actor's retirement from the active stage as a player with the conclusion of the run of Craven's comedy, "The First Year," in Boston, which will open at the Hollis Street Theatre, Monday, Jan. 7th. For the purpose of allowing Craven to accomplish a long-treasured ambition to pay tribute to the memory of his mother, Ella Mayer Craven, which was that he would "carry on" until he appeared as a star in his birthplace, Boston, Golden will promote his close friend to stardom for the Boston engagement.

Frank Craven

Mr. Craven is to retire from the artistic end of his profession because of a burning desire to give all his time to the writing of plays. His success as a playwright has been sensational and he feels now that he can afford to spend the balance of his days writing for the stage instead of acting upon it.

Completes Thirty Years of Service

An interesting stage anniversary will be observed next week when Zelda Sears, author and one of the principal players of "Lollipop," completes her thirtieth year of activity in the theatre. It is a sort of "double event," since Miss Sears will round her third decade in the theatre just as she began her career, represented both as a writer and an actress.

When Zelda Sears was sixteen she sought an interview with Sarah Bernhardt. The stage manager, whom she approached, thought she was an applicant for work in the mob scenes, and he engaged her for "extra" parts during Bernhardt's run. It was on December 31, 1893, that Miss Sears made her first stage appearance, as a Court Lady, in "Camille." She was paid fifty cents for the performance. On New Year's morning her backstage impressions of Bernhardt appeared in print. She was paid "space rates," exactly $2.85 for the story.

All her fellow-players will be Mis Sears' guests after the performance Monday night to give the New Year a proper and festive welcome.

THEATRICAL BALL

Rapid progress is being made by the committee in charge of the Theatrical ball to be given by the stage employes of the Boston Theatres at the Mechanics building on Thursday evening, January 17. This is the fourth annual affair to be given by this organization, and judging from the present interest it is not unlikely that a record crowd will attend. A concert by an orchestra of fifty men, led by Charles Frank, will open the evening's festivities. This will be followed by vaudeville features.

NEW PRODUCER

Russell Janney, producer of "Sancho Panza," in which Otis Skinner will be seen at the Colonial Theatre, January 7, is a young Yale University graduate, who has taken up a theatrical career with more than a measure of success. Although the youngest producer in New York, Mr. Janney has to his credit "The Garden of Paradise," "June Love" and "Marjolaine."

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE—Moscow Art Theatre in return engagement, presenting five new plays. The repertoire for the week will be as follows:—Monday, "Ivanoff", first time here; Tuesday matinee, "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch"; Tuesday night, "The Mistress of the Inn", first time here; Wednesday matinee, "Ivanoff"; Wednesday night, "The Brothers Karamazoff", first time here; Thursday, "An Enemy of the People"; first time here; Friday, "In the Claws of Life", first time here; Saturday matinee, "The Lower Depths", and Saturday night, "The Cherry Orchard."

* * *

SELWYN—"Sweet Lavender," a comedy by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. A revival by an all English cast, headed by Anthony Gordon, who plays the role of Dick Phenyl, created about thirty years ago by Edward Terry. Included in the company will be Viva Birkett, Sydney Paxton, Alice Moffat, Edgar Payne and Ambrose Manning.

* * *

ST. JAMES—"Lombardi, Ltd.", a comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton; played originally with success with Leo Carrillo as its star. A new type of hero is introduced in the personage of a designer of fashionable gowns and millinery. Walter Gilbert will undertake the role played by Mr. Carrillo.

* * *

FENWAY—"West of the Water Tower," opening today; a Paramount picture which tells a story of small town life and which presents Glen Hunter as its star. Prominent in the cast are Ernest Torrence, George Fawcett, May McAvoy and Saza Pitts. The story is said to be an indictment of small town morals. Other special Paramount features will be included in the program.

SOMERVILLE—"The O'Brien Girl," a musical play by George M. Cohan. First presented as a Summer show at the Tremont. The principle role will be played by Leeta Corder.

GETTING THE MONEY

The week's engagement of John Barrymore in "Hamlet," which terminates at the Boston Opera House, is making records. The statements of performances played up to last night by Mr. Barrymore, together with the advance sales, insure that the gross on the week will be over $31,000, and it may possibly exceed $32,000. The chief interest now for those concerned, including Arthur Hopkins, the producer, is whether the window sales to come will lift the week's gross above the world's record for a Shakespearian attraction. That record, $32,565, was made by Mr. Barrymore at the Manhattan Opera House during the week of December 10, as he terminated his special three weeks' engagement in New York.

STATE BALLROOM

The birth of the New Year will be ushered in at the State ballroom on Monday night in gala fashion, with a special dansant. The hall has been decorated and some unusual novelties are promised. The State Theatre orchestra will play several new numbers.

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK" COMING

"Little Old New York," the Cosmopolitan film starring Marion Davies, is announced as the next big photoplay attraction to visit Boston, coming to the Park Theatre on Monday, January 14th. "Little Old New York" has been breaking attendance records wherever it has been shown and at its premiere in Los Angeles it had the distinction of drawing high praise from all the noted directors of the motion picture colony.

The comment of these experts is significant. Here is what some of them said:

Allan Crossland—Marion Davies is one of the most difficult roles possible; gives a wonderful performance.

King Baggot—The photoplay is a masterpiece and Marion Davies gives a truly wonderful performance.

Reginald Barker—was overwhelmed by the supreme artistry of "Little Old New York." Everything about it is superb and the man's work beggars description.

George Melford—I have directed more than a score of fight scenes, but I never saw such pure fights as in "Little Old New York." It's a masterpiece.

George D. Baker—I cannot speak too highly of Miss Davies' art. Her portrayal is superb, the very last word.

Tod Browning—Besides congratulating Sidney Olcott (director of the picture) for his amazing touches in "Little Old New York," I want to congratulate Miss Davies for giving to this film her splendid artistry.

Frank Lloyd—"Little Old New York" is one of the most entertaining, educational historically accurate screen plays I ever have seen. Miss Davies is splendid.

Otis Skinner Returns in Spectacular Play

Otis Skinner, like one or two other actors of the contemporary stage, usually rises superior to the plays provided him. The exceptions in Mr. Skinner's career have included "Francesca da Rimini," "The Duel," "The Honor of the Family" and "Kismit." It was a long stretch of time between "Francesca" and "The Duel" and quite a period of waiting between his Colonel Philippe Brideau in "The Honor of the Family" and his Hajj the Beggar in "Kismit." And now, after several years of plays not quite up to the heroic figure of Mr. Skinner, he appears in something which gives an indication of real art in the theatre—Melchior Lengyal's "Sancho Panza."

Where Burlesque Holds Sway

WALDRON'S CASINO

A brilliant program of burlesque, vaudeville and motion picture entertainment has been prepared for next week's program at Waldron's Casino. The coming of the New Year will be celebrated throughout the week, and Monday night there will be an extra midnight show.

The burlesque portion of the program will be supplied by Dave Marion, long a great favorite with burlesque theatre patrons. His offering is called "Dave Marion's Show." The twenty-one scenes range from the interior of a street car to a sandstorm on the Sahara Desert.

Although the company of burlesquers is composed mostly of youths and misses, there are three popular old-timers. They are Dave Marion himself, Josephine Sabel and Charley Diamond.

The photoplays on the program are "Rouged Lips," starring Viola Dana, and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," starring Mary Miles Minter and Antonio Moreno.

GAYETY THEATRE

Beautiful chorus girls in a diversity of musical numbers that will afford innumerable costume changes, good singing and much graceful dancing, is one of the attractive features of "Let's Go," coming to the Gayety Theatre next week. In the fifteen scenes there will be twenty musical numbers, accompanied by some very marvelous dancing. Particularly true is this of eighteen specially trained chorus girls who have been drilled along the lines of the work done by the famous Tiller girls. The words and music of all of the numbers are by Ruby Cowan.

Heading the cast is Manny King and Pat White, others being Kitty Madison, Burton Carr, Nan Peton, Florence Kane, Mlle. Flamita, Joe Barrett and Sonny Thompson's entertainers. Little Jim, thew restling bear, will be an extra feature.

There will be an extra midnight performance New Year's eve, starting at 11:30 o'clock.

She Flibbed to Erlanger and Landed Job

Marjorie Gateson, whose slim figure and blonde attractiveness makes her one of the notably handsome young women of musical comedy, has been welcomed by her Boston friends during the run of "A Perfect Lady" with Constance Binney at the Shubert. Miss Gateson has always been in musical comedy during the eight years she has been on the stage. She admits that she practically fought her way into ranks, for the going was not easy at the start. She tried many agents and many managers without luck and finally decided to bluff her way in.

Marjorie Gateson

Going to A. L. Erlanger to apply for a position she fibbed—she admits. When she detailed to the manager a list of parts recently played, Mr. Erlanger decided that he could not do without one so attractive and with so much experience. Miss Gateson got the part and made good in it. Afterwards she owned up to Mr. Erlanger and was forgiven. That he did not hold it against her is proved by the fact that she played the principal role in his "Little Cafe" company, in which she was seen in Boston.

Walter Gilbert Turns to Dress Designing

Designing dresses is something a stock leading man is not supposed to know much about. Nevertheless, Walter Gilbert, who plays hero in almost all of Mr. Giles' productions at the St. James, is going to design dresses this week. Furthermore, his creations will make audiences gasp, and he ought to get enough advertising out of it to retire from acting and go in for dress designing. His taste for styles is a necessary accessory to the fact that he draws a leading man's salary. His part tells him just exactly what to do and so he will learn all the "business" and follow the directions. There isn't a chance for him to go wrong. "Lombardi, Ltd." will give Mr. Gilbert new opportunities. It will also mark his 166th week in Boston.

Brings Moscow Art

MORRIS GEST

An American producer who had the courage of his convictions and an unbounded faith in his profession, he braved the hazards of theatrical venture and brought to America the famous Moscow Art Theatre, which opens a return engagement in Boston at the Opera House on Monday evening, presenting five plays that have never been given in this city by these players.

Italians Thought Actor an American Priest

So realistic was J. Barney Sherry's portrayal of a Catholic priest in "The White Sister," Lillian Gish's dramatic photoplay, that Mr. Sherry was frequently greeted with the reverence due his character when he appeared on the streets of Rome during the making of the picture.

Unfortunately, Mr. Sherry does not know how to speak Italian, but many of the natives called him the Padre Americano, never imagining that he was merely an actor playing a role. Mr. Sherry's performance is one of the high lights in "The White Sister" at the Majestic.

PADEREWSKI RECITAL

Paderewski, the pianist, will give his second recital tomorrow afternoon in Symphony Hall. His program will include Fugue of Bach, Andante with Variations by Haydn, Rondo of Mozart, Beethoven's Sonata Op. 31, No. 2, Brahms' Paganini Variations, Ballade, Nocturne, Mazurkas and Waltz of Chopin, and Liszt's Don Juan Fantasia.

SCHMITZ, SOLOIST

The not regular pair of Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts in Symphony Hall will take place a week from next Friday afternoon, January 11, and Saturday evening, January 12.

As soloist, E. Robert Schmitz, the celebrated French pianist, will be heard in d'Indy's Symphony on a French Mountain Air.

Catherine Richardson's Portraits Are Seen by Society, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

As modest as she is talented is Miss Catherine Richardson, artist daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Richardson of Brookline.

When an exhibition of portraits done by her was opened at the Copley Gallery the other day, this exceptionally brilliant young artist refused to be on hand.

Naturally, a highly interested crowd of Social Register folk are viewing the portraits, which are of special interest to them, as practically all of the paintings are of people family ar to them.

Boston Copyright Backrach
Suzanne Richardson

Phyllis Richardson

There's a large wonderfully life-like one of the artist's twin sisters, the Misses Suzanne and Phyllis Richardson, both of whom are making their bow to society this Winter. On the opposite wall hangs a splendid likeness of Susanne, in which the latter, gowned in a boyishly simple costume of black velvet, holds a crystal ball.

The self-portrait, revealing the interesting face of the young artist, caused many to linger quite a while before it, while the portrait of her father also aroused much favorable comment.

The crayon drawing of Miss Richardson's young cousin, Miss Margery Richardson, was perhaps the most remarkable of them all. Margery Richardson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic L. W. Richardson, was one of the prettiest buds presented to society last Winter.

Other pieces in the collection included portraits of Mrs. Shepley, Olive Perry, Adele Parrill, and crayon drawings of Mrs. Potter and several children.

Miss Richardson, whose genius spark seems already to have been kindled into something greater, has been studying abroad the past few years. The exhibition of her works—she is only twenty-two years old—will continue until January 5.

THERE was a perceptible craning of necks when Miss "Elec" Sears and John Barrymore made their way across the lobby of a down-town hotel the other day.

Sport-loving "Elec" Sears is quite a friend of the Barrymore family, and whenever Ethel Barrymore comes to town she and Miss Sears usually chum around together.

Miss Sears

When I saw her the other day with the hero of "Hamlet," her tall, slender figure was gowned in a smart black coat banded with gray fur, and a wide-brimmed black hat to complete the costume.

Her famous escort with his soft hat turned jauntily up on one side was, well—John Barrymore.

In Days of "Scaramouche" the Boys Were Rough

In the days of the French Revolution as shown in "Scaramouche," now at the Park Theatre, it was considered quite below the dignity of a gentleman to pay for a theatre ticket. That was left to the underlings who sat in the pit and tried to enjoy the performance.

Hardly a night went by that some band of young nobles did not burst swords in hand into the theatre, past the doorkeeper, through the audience, and up to the stage, where they requisitioned chairs, smoked their pipes, conversed on the topics of the day, and pretty well prevented the ticket holders in the pit from seeing anything at all of the performance.

The result of this practice was frequent riots and affrays in which theatres, players, stage and scenery got pretty well damaged and heads were broken right and left. Such an affray, but over a different matter, is shown in the Theatre Feydau, during the picture of "Scaramouche." The scene is very nearly true to historical fact for the Feydau was wrecked and gutted during exactly such a riot between the public and the nobles.

NOVELTIES IN OPERA FROM CHICAGO

The production of "Boris Godunoff," especially mounted by the Chicago Opera Company for Feodor Challapin, the great Russian basso who will sing the title role at the Boston Opera House during the Chicago company's visit, need hold no terrors for music-lovers who may have heard certain misgivings regarding the Russian blots as a vehicle for grand opera.

The work will be sung in the more limpid, and more generally understood Italian. It will have two performances, and its companion Russian piece, "Snow Maiden," will have one. The latter will be sung in the excellent French version.

The managing committee announces that mail orders will be opened and filled in the order of their receipt commencing next Thursday. Subscription for season and single tickets will be taken until Saturday, Jan. 12. Attention is called to the fact that special telephone lines have been installed direct to subscription headquarters of the Boston-Chicago Opera Association at the Boston Opera House under the number Back Bay 2860.

Fairy Story by Violinist in Burlesque Show

Manny King, whose violin playing is one of the chief features of enjoyment of "Let's Go," at the popular Gayety Theatre next week, has written a book of stories concerning this instrument. "Many, many years ago," writes Mr. King, "a beautiful princess pursued by a cruel knight took refuge in a forest of teak wood. The knight and his men were about to overtake her when a kind hearted tree concealed her in its trunk. But the cruel knight and his men lingered about so long that the poor princess was smothered to death. Ever after that her mournful voice could be heard at night chanting songs and sighing later, when her father, the good king discovered her body, he caused a part of the tree to be made into a violin from which to the present day the voice of the princess is said to sing whenever the bow is drawn across the strings."

THEY SPREAD IT THINNER THAN THEY USED TO

REMEMBER the heavy white spread on grandmother's "company" bed? We still use bedspreads. But they're much thinner now. Easier to launder, too.

That's because the newest ones are of crinklecloth. It looks dressy. And doesn't have to be ironed. Single bed size, with sham, cream with blue, rose or gold stripes, $6.50.

Not so heavy, but just as practical, are other crepey spreads. Plain white, $2.00. With colored stripes, $4.75.

CANDLEWICK spreads are quite popular now, too. They're tufted on Japanese crepe. Colored tufts on white crepe, or white on colored crepe. Single bed size, with roll cover attached, $4.50. Large size, $5.25.

Lazy ladies like odd little pillows for an afternoon nap. They place these on the bed, in a group close up to the large pillows. Dainty slips of lawn sell for 60c. These may be made more charming by adding a lace edge. Filet lace about an inch wide is 4 yards for 25 cents. Over small down pillows of pink or blue sateen (at $1.50) they make a bedroom very feminine. Cotton and silk floss-filled pillows sell for only 75 cents.

Now that Winter has come, we feel a friendly regard for wool puffs. Soft, prettily covered ones sell for $3.50.

MANY clever women make dresser scarfs to match their bedspreads. If you're not so energetic, buy handmade ones of filet lace, 18x36, for $2.25. Or get a strip of cotton crepe the color of your hangings. Run a piece of imitation cluny lace across each end. Two-inch cluny is 37½ cents a yard. Or pretty cream braid with fringe, 3 inches wide, 15 and 17 cents.

Electric boudoir lamps in blue, rose or tan are just the thing for the dressing table. They sell for only $2.00. You can get artistic painted shades, black ships, dancing figures, etc., on a colored ground, for 10 cents.

SOLDIERS SEE THEMSELVES IN FILM

"Powder River," now showing at Tremont Temple in its fourth week, has reflected in mirror form, the activities of many of the doughboys of the World War. Veterans who served over seas in many of the battles of the war have become thrilled by the photographs and moving pictures presented on the screen showing themselves during the war. The management of the Tremont Temple reports that a number of the boys of the 26th Division, which consisted of the New England section, have left their names and addresses at the box office and can authenticate the government war picture because of their own participation in it.

The actors are American doughboys with mud and blood and desperate courage for their make-up. You see handfuls of mud-plastered Yanks see smoking toward a shell hole; you see those same Yankees crawl out and dart forward. Some of them go right on. Here and there you see one crumple and fall.

On account of the demand for seats the management of the Tremont Temple announces that on Monday night, New Year's Eve, there will be three performances: At 6:00, 8:30 and 11:30 p. m.

8 Persons and Dog Are Rescued at Somerville Fire

GIRL AND HER RESCUED PET

Six-year-old Naglia Jones and her dog, "Fluff," were carried from burning home by Ladderman Isreal Hall. Both the girl and the dog were partly overcome by smoke.

Six-year-old Naglia Jones and her dog "Fluff" were carried to safety when an early morning fire threatened ten persons living at Nos. 332-34 Somerville avenue, Somerville, today.

Truckman Isreal Hall of Ladder 1, Somerville, is Naglia's hero, especially because of the rescue of the dog.

Fire was discovered by M. E. Jones, father of Naglia, who conducts a jewelry store in front of the ground floor. The Jones live in the rear. Jones ran to Union square and pulled a fire alarm box.

When Ladder Company 1 arrived from the square, the house was filled with smoke. Mrs. Jones was able to walk, but Naglia and her dog were too far gone from the smoke.

Fireman Hall then went upstairs and led out Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gaccioli and their five children: Alexander, nineteen, Samuel, eighteen, Josephine, fourteen, Angelo, twelve, and Charles, nine.

The fire is thought to have started from an overheated stove.

MARRIAGE 'FATAL TO CAREERS'

Harvard Psychologist Finds It Drives Girl Geniuses Into Oblivion

Wedding bells sound the knell of women's careers, according to Dr. A. A. Roback, Harvard psychologist.

The distinguished inventor of the intelligence tests that bear his name ought to know. He has followed the course of hundreds of his girl pupils after leaving college and those who showed potential genius and leadership invariably sunk into oblivion after marriage, he declares.

"Marriage and a career are two non-miscible elements," he told an American reporter today. "If a woman will be an artist, if she aspires to rise to great heights, to launch upon a career, then she should never marry. Marriage has ruined more careers than the world will ever know of."

COULD NAME HUNDREDS.

"I have in my possession data on the life of every one of my girl students in the last ten years. I have followed them in the course of their life, though they did not realize it, from the time they left college.

"I could name hundreds of girls who won high honors in classes, Phi Beta Kappa students, class leaders, social leaders, who had all the earmarks of potential leaders, married and then joined the great unknown.

WOULD BAN BOYS.

"If a girl shows that she possesses genius, that she has marked ability to draw, to create, to write, then keep her away from the boys. That is, providing that you would have her great. If you think she would make a greater mother than an artist, then let her marry.

"Girls are strong-headed and temperamental. They believe that they can surmount difficulties. They believe that they can marry and still pursue a career. But they are quickly disillusioned.

"I have studied girls in the classrooms. They have shown marked genius. Great things were predicted for them. They left college, and rapidly rose to position of importance in the world.

FREEDOM ESSENTIAL.

"Then came marriage. They dropped out of sight, became contended home-mistresses. Thoughts of a career were either voluntarily forgotten, or renounced with many a pang and heart ache when the disillusioned woman learned that the bonds of a home had her enchained, and that intellectual freedom was no longer hers.

"Freedom—freedom from all restrictions and alliances is necessary if one is to be a great artist. Marriage, with its system of check and balances, mutual ties and restrictions, demands these things.

"The conclusion is obvious—if you would have a career, then marriage should be forgotten until it is achieved.

JUMP IN PRICE OF WOOLEN GOODS IS DUE COMING YEAR

New York, Dec. 29 (I.N.S.).—The American Woolen Company's prices for its 1924 Fall lines of woolen and worsted will be from 5 to 15 per cent, higher, it was learned today. The lines will be opened about January 15.

Company officials lay the necessity for the increase to higher raw wool prices and advances in wages of mill operatives.

It was admitted by company officials that the woolen industry and allied garment trades have just passed through one of the most disastrous seasons in the history of the industry. The unseasonable weather retarded the movement of fabrics and finished articles. As a whole the trade was said to have weathered the stormy period well enough.

Leading trade interests believe the price raise by the American Woolen Company will tend to stabilize the market.

FINDS CRUISER CINCINNATI FASTEST U. S. SHIP AFLOAT

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 29.—For four hours the new scout cruiser Cincinnati churned the open ocean under the eyes of the Naval Trial Board and returned to Tacoma adjudged the fastest American vessel afloat, although her official test showed her one-tenth of a knot slower than her sister ship, the Omaha.

The apparent discrepancy is explained by her builders and naval officers, pointing out that the Cincinnati had a six months growth of barnacles on her bottom, held to have reduced her speed by from one-quarter to half a knot. The records show a sustained speed for four hours of 34.5 knots whereas the Omaha made 34.9. The Omaha came fresh from drydock for her test.

The Cincinnati will be turned over to the navy Monday at Bremerton.

COOLIDGE, BY RADIO, TO START SHIP ON TRIP AROUND WORLD

New York, Dec. 29.—President Coolidge, on January 5, will press a button in the White House which will send the steamship President Harrison from San Francisco on a trip around the world.

Officials of the Radio Corporation of America in making this announcement today, explained that the pressure of the President's finger would send a flash to the wireless station at Rocky Point, Long Island, which would relay it across the continent to Marshall, Cal.

The Marshall station will transmit the flash to the ship's radio, connected in such a way as to blow the Harrison's whistle, the signal for departure.

'CAVE-MAN' HINDU HELD FOR TRIAL

Girl Who Charges He Wooed Her at Gun Point Ignores Him in Court

"Prince" Mohammed Ykan, Hindu Tufts medical student, sat in Municipal Court today and gazed soulfully at Miss Jeannette Gilman, hotel stenographer and object of the Prince's unrequited love.

The girl, on the opposite side of the court room, failed entirely to note the presence of her royal wooer and gazed unseemingly into the recesses back of Judge Bolster's judicial head.

The Prince, appeared to answer charges preferred by Miss Gilman. The first is that Mohammed Ykan forced her to sign a marriage license application and the second has to do with a blow the Prince is alleged to have struck the girl.

The publicity that has come to the Prince since he first tried to wed Miss Gilman at the point of a revolver is causing the royal cave man much concern.

Only an hour before the trial he called Miss Gilman on the telephone.

"This is the Prince," he told the girl. "Why are you causing me so much publicity?"

The incident was told Judge Bolster by Special Officer Di Sesso.

The justice finally postponed the case until next Friday.

Meantime, the "Prince" has been granted his freedom with the posting of a $50 forfeit.

Aside to the "Prince's" attorney Justice Bolster intimated that it might be an excellent thing for the royal lover to cease annoying Miss Gilman. The attorney assured the court that this would be done.

"It's nothing in my young life" was the only comment Miss Gilman would make as she betook herself from the courtroom and the gaze of her erstwhile admirer.

MORE THAN $500,000 PASSED

Two Turn Up Today in West End Bakeshop; Appear in Other Bay State Cities

Chicago, Dec. 29.—More than $500,000 in counterfeit $10 bills have been placed in circulation between the eastern coast and the Rocky Mountains, according to Federal secret service men who have assembled here to clean up makers and circulators of the bogus currency.

Government operatives who have traced the counterfeit money in virtually every large city between New York and Omaha and Boston and Galveston, several nights ago found 900 of the bogus bills in an underground cache in a wooded place near here.

All the bills are said to be Federal Reserve notes, series 70, bearing a portrait of Andrew Jackson, and the number D-322 under the seal. Made with genuine silk threads, they are said to be almost undistinguishable from the genuine bills.

Among the victims in Chicago, according to government operatives, is the Chicago Sanitary District Board, which received from a bank a package of spurious notes which had been accepted by the cashier.

The discovery of the cache of the counterfeit bills was made by operatives after an alleged confession by Peter Sweeney, arrested recently in St. Louis, after he had attempted to pass some of the spurious notes, according to Secret Service men.

Two Bogus $10 Bills Passed in West End

The United States Secret Service office today issued another warning regarding counterfeit ten-dollar bills. Two of the bills were passed in a West End bakery today. They are described as being issued on the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, with the head and figure of Andrew Jackson. The ink is much darker than on genuine bills, and the paper stiffer. The counterfeiters are using three different serial numbers, A35367540, A41103761 and 41371061.

Secret service men have recently picked up these counterfeit ten-dollar bills in Gloucester, Rockport, Lawrence, Lowell, Boston and Providence.

DIVORCE FIGHT OF STOFFELS ENDS IN DRAW

He was alleged to have bought fluffy silk things for other women.

She was alleged to have entertained a youthful fiend in her bedroom at a "pajama" breakfast.

Judge Prest in Suffolk Probate Court decided it was a draw and that the couple would have to continue life's more or less hectic journey as man and wife and dismissed their cross-suits for divorce.

Mrs. Stoffel.

The man in the case is Louis M. Stoffel, a postoffice employe of No. 7 Nelson street, Dorchester, and the woman is his wife, Helen G. Stoffel.

The wife first sued for a divorce, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. The husband promptly filed a cross-suit, charging infidelity and naming Philip McManus, a nineteen-year-old youth of Whiting street, Dorchester.

The wife and her witnesses testified that Stoffel purchased silk lingerie for his lady friends and then boasted about it. A joy ride in Stoffel's mail truck in which Stoffel and four young women—also a quantity of liquor—figured, was also told the judge. Mrs. Stoffel, who has been married twelve years, further testified that her husband resorted to physical violence at times.

The husband's sister, Elizabeth, was the chief witness for the husband. She testified that while the Stoffels were Summering at Hough's Neck in 1922 she served breakfast to Mrs. Stoffel and Philip McManus, while they were attired only in their pajamas and were in Mrs. Stoffel's bedroom. There was also evidence that Mrs. Stoffel and her youthful admirer caressed one another rather openly on the beach at Hough's Neck.

The young correspondent admitted that he bought Mrs. Stoffel's company, but that his conduct was always above reproach.

Judge Prest, after weighing the evidence, decided that it was more or less a case of the kettle calling the pot black and dismissed both actions.

HOLD SOLON IN ATTACK ON EX-BACKER

Because he switched his support from Representative Gleason of Ward Thirteen, James L. Cluney of Linden avenue, Roxbury, told the court that Gleason, with his brother, Joseph P. Gleason of No. 41 Linden Park street, James H. Brunnelli of No. 8 Hampshire street, Frank S. Carlino of No. 1263 Tremont street and two other men, all of Roxbury, attacked and beat him up Thursday night.

Gleason surrendered himself to Special Officer Waitt of Dudley street station. Two of Cluney's alleged assailants are still missing.

The attack, said Cluney, occurred at Washington and Dudley streets. The Gleasons, Brunelli and Carlino all pleaded not guilty. The case was continued until January 4.

Falls 400 Feet and Walks

Rome, Dec. 29.—Angelo Stabile, a naval wireless operator, fell 400 feet from the antenna atop the local station and crashed into a network of supporting wires where he hung until workmen rushed to the rescue. Once on the ground he revived and was able to walk to a hospital.

REV. MR. DRAKE "PEEVED" AT BANK STORY

Marlboro, Dec. 29.—Rev. Paul Harris Drake is all "het up" again.

This time the "pint-in-the-pulpit" pastor waxes wroth at newspaper stories indicating that the charter was refused the Marlboro Trust Company because Rev. Mr. Drake was one of the petitioners.

"The amazing assertions in the press are too ludicrous for consideration and, as a work of humor, they run neck and neck with the works of Mark Twain and Irvin Cobb."

Rev. Mr. Drake allows that he refuses to be a "scapegoat for the alibi artists" an longer. "To think," he says, "that a simple, hard-working, wood-sawing minister of the gospel and humble servant of Christ can throw a monkey wrench into the banking machinery of this Commonwealth."

Rev. Mr. Drake offers the information that he was born in Stoughton on Washington's birthday, 1885, "of poor but honest parents."

"My ancestors came to Weymouth in 1635," said Drake. "None of them ever went to jail, sold rum or robbed the poor, as far as I have been able to learn." Then he quoted Patrick Henry: "If this is treason, make the most of it."

Rev. Mr. Drake says he expects to stay in Marlboro the rest of his life unless the publicity he has received causes him to swell up and burst. "Should this event transpire," he said, "what rejoicing would take place in Marlboro."

TAKE CRUCIFIX FROM THROAT OF WOMAN

An operation has just been successfully performed at the City Hospital in which a crucifix two inches long and wider than a 50-cent piece was removed from a woman's throat in less than three minutes, and without the use of a knife.

The crucifix was lodged in the lower part of the throat. It was imbedded there for ten days before an acute condition was caused. Then the patient was unable to swallow and was in danger of strangulation. Doctors were called. They were puzzled. The woman had swallowed something, but what and where it was remained a mystery.

She was taken to the City Hospital where Dr. Edward J. Monahan, a nose and throat specialist took X-ray pictures of her throat. The object was revealed as a crucifix.

Dr. Monahan introduced a lighted instrument through the mouth and after lifting the tongue and larynx removed the crucifix.

U. S. S. COLORADO OFF TO EUROPE TONIGHT

New York, Dec. 29.—The superdreadnaught Colorado will leave Tompkinsville, Staten Island, tonight on her first foreign cruise, it was announced at the Navy Yard. She will visit Portsmouth, England, then Cherbourg, Naples and Gibraltar, returning to New York about February 15.

40 Y. M. C. A. EVENTS ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Forty events are on the program for the annual open house program of the Huntington avenue branch of the Y. M. C. A. on New Year's Day. With suitable weather it is expected 7,000 persons will attend.

A general inspection of the building and swimming will be in progress from 2:30 to 10 o'clock. Moving pictures, with Miss Mildred Harron as pianist, and concerts by the Red Triangle Orchestra, will be among the features. The entire physical and athletic equipment of the branch will then be brought into play.

LINER DEVONIAN SUBS FOR ADRIATIC

The Leyland liner Devonian, which arrived at this port from Liverpool on Christmas Day, sailed for New York today to take the sailing of the White Star liner Adriatic, scheduled for Saturday January 5. Several Bostonians who had booked passage on the Devonian will go to New York to board her.

THUGS SPOIL HIS TRIP TO FLORIDA

Carl Ehal, No. 40 Dwight street, decided to escape the cold and spend the Winter in Florida.

For some reason known only to himself, he purchased four suits of heavy underwear and started home. Then came a series of events that may halt Ehal's trip indefinitely.

As he headed home with his underwear he was attacked by two thugs. He beat them off and they fled.

Pedestrians gave chase. Then Patrolman Coleman Joyce of the East Dedham street station, joined in. He fired two shots and, as a result, captured Joseph Silver and William Granville.

In Municipal Court, Sergeant Purtholomew Winn, appearing for the prosecution, asked Chief Justice Bolster to hold Ehal as a material witness, along with the men. He feared Ehal would hurry to Florida were he at liberty.

The men were sent to jail, to await action of the grand jury, and Ehal unable to furnish $300 bond, went with them.

Chinese Free U. S. Man

Peking, Dec. 29 (AP).—F. W. Schmalzried, an American missionary attached to the reformed church in the United States, kidnaped by bandits last November, was released on December 26, according to advices received here from Changsha, Hunan province.

SAFE-CRACKERS FAIL IN LAWRENCE BREAK

Lawrence, Dec. 29.—Amateur crackemen who had visions of starting the new year with a sizable bankroll, found the combination of the safe in the office of the Hart Foundry Company, No. 10 Allen street, too much for them, today.

The burglars entered the office through a window which they first removed a square of glass. The men hammered and chiseled the combination of the safe, but without success. The safe contained the weekly payroll of the foundry company. Several desks in the company office were rifled, but William R. Hart, owner of the factory, declared that nothing of value was missing.

WHITE MAY ENTER RACE IN MAINE

Portland, Me., Dec. 29.—Congressman Wallace H. White, Jr., grandson of the late Senator William P. Frye, may enter the contest with the other four announced candidates for the nomination for Governor in the Republican primary next June. In view of the announcement that Governor Baxter would not seek re-election, he is understood to be seriously considering becoming a candidate. Other candidates are Mayor A. R. Day of Bangor, A. S. Crawford, Jr., of Caribou, State Senator Ralph O. Brewster of Portland and Frank G. Farrington of Augusta.

AGED FLIRT DAZZLED MANICURE WITH COSTLY EVENING WRAP

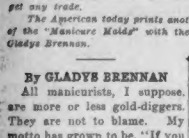
SMOOTH WORKER HAD GIRL EXPECTING WEDDING RING

What about the girl who tints and polishes your nails?
The manicure maid?
"Date her up," the men think.
"Nice little thing!" the women say patronizingly.
The men go to her to hold hands, take her to dinner if she'll go; make her if they can.
Men and women sit and tell her their intimate affairs.
She's sympathetic, tactful, jolly.
She's always good-looking. If she weren't good-looking she wouldn't get any trade.
The American today prints another story describing the experiences of the "Manicure Maids" with the "Manicure Men." It is told by Gladys Brennan.

By GLADYS BRENNAN

All manicurists, I suppose, are more or less gold-diggers. They are not to blame. My motto has grown to be, "If you can get something for nothing grab it."

Four years ago I started out to make an honest living and I took up manicuring. It's a game you might be able to get an honest living out of, but you certainly won't amass a fortune if you stick to the honest part.



When you're young and you know, with the right clothes, you could make Lillian Russell at her best look like "Plain Jane," you can't help wishing you had the clothes. It always seems that when you're wishing the hardest for a few of the extras life gives to the rich, some man comes along and offers to put up the cash.

HITS HOME RUN.

I'd been in the business for about a year. I was working in a barber shop and going through one of those wishing spells. One of those "beau brummels" came in one day and I knew I'd hit a home run.

Sure enough the next day a five pound box of candy came to little me and there followed in the course of the week flowers and a bottle of wonderful perfume. I admit it was new to me. Everything I'd ever been able to buy and pay for myself was cheap and I hated cheapness.

All those things looked like money to me and the "beau" with his cane and spats and air of money began to represent King Midas in my young fancy.

The story is short! When the invitation to dinner came, I accepted. Innocence is another word for ignorance and I was that; under those circumstances would be called "innocent." He called for me at the shop after the rest of them had gone.

OFFERS EVENING WRAP.

In he came in dinner clothes and there was little me wearing a cheap cloth dress. I felt uncomfortable. Then he put a box down on the chair and said, "I borrowed this from my sister thinking you might want to use it."

It was an evening wrap. I'll never forget it—sea green with cuffs and collar of white fox. I was trembling as I put it on. The nearest I had ever been to such a thing before was the front of a plate glass show window.

"It's becoming to you," he said. No raving about my beauty. He was too wise for that.

All through dinner I had visions of marrying into Boston society and getting my pictures in the paper and all the rest of the bunk. The meal was a triumph. There were flowers on the table for me to wear. I must admit that he did the smoothest piece of work I ever saw. While we were drinking our coffee he reached over and took my hand.

"I have never known anyone that I liked as well as I like you," he commenced. "There isn't anything I wouldn't do for you. Do you like me even a little?"

Honest, I actually believed that when I said I did he'd slip a three carat rock on my finger and tell me to write the announcement for the morning editions.

I hesitated and then said, "Yes, I do like you."

He looked happy.

WIFE IN EUROPE.

"You're a wonderful girl. At present my wife is in Europe but——"

I didn't hear any more. It had never occurred to me that the fellow might be married. My expression must have dumfounded him because he stopped talking and without a word I walked right out of that glorious evening cape and I beat it.

That was my first experience. From then on I grew to learn that there's many a girl been caught with the line that boy handed me.

Boston American Starts Series of Dancing Lessons for Readers

Dancing has become so popular in late years that there are between 40,000 and 50,000 persons dancing every night in Greater Boston and surrounding towns. In the Summer the number jumps to nearly a half million dancers in New England.

Among this great number there are many who are constantly embarrassed because they do not know "how to do these new-fangled steps." It is for these persons that the Boston American will run this series—and of course all others will want to brush up a bit. If you follow this series your dancing will improve.

The modern style of dancing is more restful, according to Mr. O'Brien, than the old style. There is not so much knee action and raising on the toes as in days of yore. For that reason these lessons should be easy to follow.

Position and style count for as much in dancing as the steps themselves and should be practised as much. Preliminary steps for the beginner are walking and sliding. Particular emphasis should be paid to sliding, as this feet seldom leave the floor in the modern two-step.

The two-step is a short slide and close step and is counted quickly, "slide-close-step." The left foot takes a short slide, followed by the right foot in a closed step to the left, bringing the instep of the right foot to the heel of the left foot. Always be sure to close the step. Some dancers do not bring their feet together closely, and their appearance is spoiled.

WAY TO PRACTICE.

Take the right hand well of any room for the line of direction. This is the direction in which the couples are dancing around the room. The gentleman goes forward, the lady backward, he starting with left foot, the lady with right.

When the gentleman approaches his partner he should always approach her left, so that he can start down the ballroom without colliding with any of the other couples at the start. This can only be done by approaching from the left.

POSITION.

The couple stand with the man's weight mostly on his right foot, the lady's on her left, leaving the other foot free to start without overbalancing. The man's hand is placed high under the lady's left shoulder at the back. There is no hard and fast rule as to the exact spot or the number of inches from the neck where the gentleman should hold his hand. This will be regulated by the partner's height and build.

(Lesson 2 will appear in Monday's Boston American.)

PROPER WAY TO DANCE

Ada May Weeks, star in "Lollipop," and her dancing partner, "Nick" Long, here show the proper way to dance in the ballroom. Note that Miss Weeks' left hand rests lightly on her partner's shoulder. He is holding her just firmly enough to guide her in the steps. Note there is some space between them. Grace, charm and propriety are combined.

MAN IS FATALLY STRICKEN ON STREET

Found unconscious in a doorway at No. 256 C street, Charles Hansbury, fifty-five, of No. 271 West Broadway, failed to regain consciousness and died a short time later at City Hospital. The condition of the man was discovered by pedestrians. At the hospital physicians were unable to state the cause of death. A brother, John Hansbury of No. 194 Mt. Vernon street, Dedham, was notified.

CAT JEALOUS OF BABY, SADLY SCRATCHES HIM

New York, Dec. 29. (I.N.S.)—Leonard Telesca, 18 months old, of West New York, N. J., is recovering from bites and scratches inflicted by a pet cat. The animal is believed to have gone mad from jealousy because of the attention paid the baby by the family. The cat, which had been a pet for three years, was shot.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Forcing their way into the office of the Illinois Wholesale and Manufacturing Company today six armed bandits overpowered the watchman, bound him securely and then carted away 146 cases of whiskey, valued at $19,000.

BURY TWO MORE MAINE MURDER VICTIMS

Whitefield, Me., Dec. 29.—Funeral services were held today for two more of the seven victims of John Snow, whose mania for killing caused him to run amuck a week ago today here and at Jefferson.

These were for the wife and son, Kenneth, of Deputy Sheriff Frank C. Jewett, who were shot before Snow, whom they had befriended, sped away in the Jewett automobile to Jefferson, where he shot his wife, her aunt and grandmother and killed himself, but strangely spared his three-months-old child, Marion, who died yesterday of pneumonia, due to exposure.

The services today were conducted in the Jewett home by Rev. H. L. Skillings, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Gardiner. The burial was in Whitefield cemetery. The funeral had been delayed to await the arrival from Los Angeles of Mrs. Eugenia Parker, daughter of the Jewetts, her husband, Forrest Parker, and her brother Donald Jewett.

The three went to California in a truck with Fred Scott of Gardiner, leaving the first of September and taking five or six weeks for the trip. They thought of locating in Los Angeles, and Mrs. Parker, who taught school here, began teaching, but they had about decided to return to Maine when called back as a result of the tragedy.

SAIL FOR TROPICS ON THE LINER SAN BLAS

Among those sailing today for the tropics on the United Fruit liner San Blas were President Ferdinand Holmes of the Everett National Bank, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Garrett of Dedham and William Ferguson of Boston, E. S. McPherson of Gloucester, William H. Grimshaw of Providence and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Thomas of Hyannis. The San Blas carried big consignments of New England manufactures.

JUDGE CHIDES ATTY.-GEN. FOR TESTIFYING

Bangor, Me., Dec. 29.—Attorney General Ransford W. Shaw was chided by Judge Peters in the U. S. Court today when he appeared as a character witness for Attorney Willard E. Lewin, who with Sheriff Edmund W. Grant is on trial charged with conspiring to violate the prohibition amendment.

The attorney general testified he has known Lewin for thirty years and has always found him to be honest. The attorney general admitted he has been associated with Lewin in a business and social way during those thirty years.

Asked by Judge Peters if he was aware that as a result of this action he might be called upon to become the prosecuting officer for the State, Mr. Shaw answered "Yes," and said that he had come from his home, in Houlton, purposely to hear the evidence, so that he could size up the case in the event that it was brought before him.

At first he said he came on the suggestion of Governor Baxter, but later admitted that the Governor did not know that he was testifying today. He further said that "he came in Boston, and the attorney for the defense, Attorney Hinckley."

Question by Judge Peters: Do you think it is proper for a man in your position to testify? A. No.

Judge Peters: "Neither do I."

Attorney Hinckley explained that Attorney General Shaw did not wish to testify, but he (Hinckley) had insisted that he do so.

"Mr. Shaw could have asked to be excused and he would have been excused" said the judge.

Attorney Lewin took the stand and reiterated his testimony of yesterday in that he claimed Charles Orvin, alleged bootlegger who has confessed that he spent thousands of dollars to buy protection from Lewin and Grant, paid him $1,500 last August for a year's services.

Among those who testified that Attorney Lewin's reputation is good, besides Attorney General Shaw, were Harold F. Ingraham, of Bangor, Dr. Robert H. McCready of Danforth, Dr. Samuel Spruder of Dansford, Asa B. Smart of Houlton, Frank W. McCarty of Houlton, Frederick A. Pardell of Houlton, Ellsworth S. Hayden of Portland and Lincoln W. Tompkins of Sherman.

The trial is expected to be finished Monday.

Mail Planes to Land on Postoffice Turntables

Omaha, Dec. 29.—Unofficial word that he has received a patent on a device to permit air planes to land on top of postoffices has been received here by Dr. F. H. Kinyoun.

The device consists of an endless apron, motor driven, mounted on an electrically operated turntable, 50 feet, in diameter, so that the apron revolves in the opposite direction from that in which the airplane is coming, and at about the same speed as the "ship."

14 OPERAS IN BOSTON PLAN OF CHICAGO CO.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—The Chicago Civic Opera Company will make a national tour of 10,000 miles at the close of the opera season here on January, and in a period of eight weeks will present grand opera in seventeen cities. The itinerary includes cities from Boston to Houston and to San Francisco. Two special trains will transport the company, its scenery, properties and about 225 persons.

The company will appear in Boston from January 24 to February 9. Founders operas will be presented in Boston, the repertoire elsewhere will consist chiefly of "Boris Godunoff," with Feodor Chaliapin in the title role; "Mefistofele" with Edith Mason and Chaliapin; "The Jewess," in which Mme. Rosa Raisa will star, and "Cleopatra," with Mary Garden.

PLANS STREET CUT THROUGH COMMON

Representative Robert Dinsmore of East Boston, today filed a bill which is expected to bring down the usual storm of protest whenever talk of touching Boston Common is broached.

The bill provides for the extension of Commonwealth avenue, from Arlington street to Tremont street.

The bill would authorize the street commissioners of Boston to lay out and construct a highway through the Public Garden and Boston Common, with a width not less than 100 feet.

He gives as reason for the bill the traffic congestion, which is so dense some remedy must be found.

Representative Dinsmore says that if there is any opposition from historical societies and others, he is willing to withdraw the bill if they can offer some remedy to take care of the situation.

RUNS ON PLATFORM "WET AS MISSISSIPPI"

St. Louis, Dec. 27.—Fowler Smith Loftin, real estate owner, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor on a platform which he described as "wet as the Mississippi River." His announcement called the eighteenth amendment "a great mistake," and the Volstead law "tyranny."

DELEGATES MAKE MERRY AT DINNER IN HOTEL WESTMINSTER

Newspapers are the best medium of bringing advertising to the home, in the opinion of P. C. Larkin, head of the Salada Tea Company, according to William H. Walsh, toastmaster at the two-day convention of the company's salesmen, at the office, Berkeley and Stuart streets.

"The newspaper," said Mr. Walsh, "remains the maximum of advertising mediums in furnishing contact with the home."

The convention began with an address by Edgar A. Pinto, manager; William H. Walsh, advertising manager, and Miz Tito, buyer. Remarks were also made by James R. Mead, sales manager of Detroit; R. W. Erickson, sales manager of Chicago and by the New England sales managers, including H. G. Harris, John Whaley and Frank T. Samuel.

Enthusiasm, efficiency and loyalty were the keynotes of the various addresses. Manager Pinto, in calling the convention to order, declared he felt reasonably confident that when the final figures were made up for the year they would show a bigger increase in poundage for salada tea in the United States than for any previous year in the history of the company.

The salesmen were also told that although the Salada Tea building on Stuart street is only seven years old, the company has outgrown it. It was said that definite plans were under consideration for building the proposed new structure on Stuart street, which would double the present capacity.

Following the morning meeting the delegates were entertained at luncheon. Then came a tour of inspection of the factory. There was an afternoon session, at which additional addresses were made.

In the evening the delegates were tendered a dinner in the Hotel Westminster. Informal talks were made, following the dinner, by Manager Pinto, Advertising Manager Walsh, James R. Mead, R. W. Erickson, H. G. Harris, John Whooley, Frank T. Samuel and others.

RADIO AMERICAN

7 STEPS TO END BROADCASTING INTERFERENCE

Steps in the Boston American's campaign to eliminate code interference with radio broadcasting:

1—Thousands of broadcast listeners sign the petition to President Coolidge for relief from the interference.

2—President Coolidge assures a group of radio men, sent by the Boston American, of his support.

3—Interference by NAD, the Boston Navy Yard station, is stopped.

4—United Fruit Company issues orders to its vessels to stay off 450-meter wave.

5—Radio Corporation of America orders its shore stations to refuse traffic on 450 meters.

6—The spot light is turned on the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company, which is now responsible for most of the interference. (Write to C. J. Small, vice-president, Independent Wireless Telegraph Company, No. 35 Water street, New York, and tell him that American broadcast listeners want the Independent station at East Hampton, N. Y., to refuse 450-meter traffic)

7—The American reports several violations of the Shipping Board regulations against the use of 450 meters by their ship operators during broadcast hours.

OTHER OFFENDERS.

While the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company continues to be the chief offender in the matter of code interference with broadcasting, two other offenders appeared last night.

These were NAN, the naval station at Cape Lookout, N. C., and the Shipping Board steamer Eglantine.

NAN is the only naval station which now accepts traffic on 450 meters, according to the reports of the Boston American monitoring operator. Government stations are required to handle commercial traffic when there is no regular commercial station near.

The Boston American today wrote a report of this matter as shown in the interference log to the Director of Naval Communications, Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

The Shipping Board steamer Eglantine was one of the vessels whose 450-meter message was accepted by NAN.

According to regulations issued in April, any steamer on which Shipping Board vessel may send on 450 meters, except for foreign compass work, that time, these vessels have been equipped to send 706 meters for use when the 600 meter channel is crowded.

The 450-meter setting was, however, retained, as most of the compass work in foreign waters is done on this wave length. Eglantine's log, however, instructed not to use this wave near the American coast.

This violation has been reported by the American to W. J. Tuthey, radio supervisor for the Shipping Board for the New England district, and also to the radio supervisor for the New York district, where the vessel will dock.

The new device, S. M. Kintner, Westinghouse research director, asserted, would do for the human ear what the microscope had done for the human eye, and possibly would add as much to the store or human knowledge of physical and biological phenomena.

The microphone was developed during the study of a radio broadcasting problem—that of recording perfectly sound vibrations too rapid for ordinarily sensitized instruments.

The instrument consists of two small electrodes placed diametrically opposite each other in a ring of insulating material. A high voltage applied to these electrodes and to form between them a "low discharge" having the peculiar property of being affected by sound waves and causing changes exactly corresponding to the sound waves in the flow of current to the electrode.

The "low discharge," which is said to be neither a spark nor an arc, will, it was said, respond to the uttermost limit of sound vibrations and thus will permit the identification and study of all sounds in the ultra-audible region.

Investigation of the ultra-audible field probably will be left for the time being, at least, to pure physicists, while Westinghouse engineers will soon begin a study of the practical application of the new field's potentialities.

Scientists Elect Cattell

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 29—Dr. J. McKeen Cattell, of New York, was elected president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science today. He succeeds Prof. C. D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington.

METHODS OF HITCHING A CONDENSER

FIG. 2

The method of connecting a condenser depends on the way it is made. At the left, Fig. 2, is a type that should have the grid lead connected to the stationary plates, and at the right, Fig. 2, one in which the stationary plates are outside the rotor plates and in which the grid lead should usually be connected to the rotor plates, to diminish hand capacity.

Radio Reception Conditions Tonight

Radio conditions for tonight, with the exception of points in the Middle West, are not expected to be unusually favorable. Broadcasting will have good reception from points as far West as Denver, but difficulties should be experienced in picking up stations on the Pacific coast.

Communication between Boston and Montreal and other northern points should be good.

RECORD SOUNDS TOO FAINT FOR HUMAN EAR

New York, Dec. 29—Harnessing for the use of practical science the potentialities of ultra-audible ether vibration was seen today by scientists as the possible outcome of the announcement by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., of the perfection by Dr. Phillip Thomas of an electric microphone, which it was claimed, records sounds too faint for perception by the human ear.

The possible uses of ultra-audible vibrations, it was pointed out, were nearly limitless, but the first and most practical uses to which X-rays, electric waves, ultra-violet rays and radium have been put.

The microphone, employing an entirely new principle, it was asserted, would open vast fields of entomology and research by making possible the recording of sounds made by insects apparently mute.

The new device, S. M. Kintner, Westinghouse research director, asserted, would do for the human ear what the microscope had done for the human eye, and possibly would add as much to the store or human knowledge of physical and biological phenomena.

The microphone was developed during the study of a radio broadcasting problem—that of recording perfectly sound vibrations too rapid for ordinarily sensitized instruments.

The instrument consists of two small electrodes placed diametrically opposite each other in a ring of insulating material. A high voltage applied to these electrodes and to form between them a "low discharge" having the peculiar property of being affected by sound waves and causing changes exactly corresponding to the sound waves in the flow of current to the electrode.

TRY BOTH TYPES CONNECTIONS IN YOUR TUNING

BY THE RADIATOR.

Which plates, rotor or fixed, in your tuning condenser to connect with the grid is always a matter of experiment to get the least hand capacity effect?

It is always a good plan to try both connections and fix on that in which the movements of the hand cause the least detuning.

As a general rule most variable condensers have the fixed plates outside the rotor plates, so that one fixed plate is between the first rotor plate and the rotor post. The rotor shaft of the rotor is the only part offering unshielded surface to the body capacity. The leads are usually at the back of the condenser itself and thus out of consideration.

This type is usually best with the rotor plates connected to the grid. But even here, experimenting will make the operation doubly sure.

In some types either the rotor plates are outside the fixed plates, or a heavy bearing at the panel end of the condenser, thus making it necessary to respond to body capacity greater if the grid leak is connected to the rotary plates.

Here there is a chance to try two methods of connection, in condensers or transformers, always experimenting and determining which for your particular set gives the best satisfaction.

NEWSPAPERMEN ON AMRAD

Boston newspapermen took time off to tell their brethren in the British Isles all about it, last evening. Or, at any rate, they think they did.

Half a score of journalists, raconteurs and just plain newspapermen representing the Boston papers, gathered at Station WGI, Medford Hillside, and for more than half an hour broadcast New Year's greetings to their British cousins.

The broadcastings started at 10 o'clock, our time, or 3 a. m. in London, and whether or not the British newsworkers were on the receiving end of the program has not yet been learned.

The program was in charge of Director H. D. Miller. Among those present were Robert Ford, Boston American war correspondent; Norman Ritchie, Boston Post, Paul Wait, special writer, Boston Traveler; A. J. Philpot, Boston Globe; Henry T. Claus, Boston Transcript; Franklin Cutler, correspondent, Boston Herald; W. J. Halligan, Boston Telegram; Joe Toye, Boston Traveler; Thomas F. Phelan, Boston Advertiser; Charles M. Stow, Christian Science Monitor.

The Listener

I wonder how many of us listen in during the daytime programs from WNAC and WGI. I always try to catch the time signals from Shepards at noon, and I always make a try to get Amrad's piano recitals. Both Shepard and Amrad give me lots of daytime enjoyment with piano music, player or regular. Perhaps it's my ear, but the music comes through with less noise than most any other kind of music, and it's easier on the nerves to the original input into the microphone.

• • •

I hope WDAP, the Chicago Board of Trade station, keeps up its record-breaking giant record this week. And I wish even more than that, one of our local stations would undertake it. It would give us all the benefit of a high class superheterodyne, with the reradiated volume we are used to in the local concerts. How about it, WGI?

• • •

You've all heard Mel Miller, the soloist at the dinner concerts of WIP Philadelphia. Well, I ran into him on the street the other day right here in Boston. He has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George O. Stroot of the Chelsea Naval Hospital. He is a nephew of Commander R. G. Stiler, U. S. N., retired.

MAINE DEAD AREA IS OVERCOME BY 'SUPER'

Maine is generally considered to be a "dead area" as far as radio reception is concerned. It was, until they discovered the American's Super. Here is one Super enthusiast who manages to drag in DX stations he never heard before with such regularity and volume.

He is Walter E. Hedman, of Jemtland, Me. He has had considerable experience building sets for himself and others, and he speaks well of the American's Supper. Mr. Hedman says:

"I have completed my American Super and in four evenings I tuned in the stations on the enclosed list. I only use it evenings as I am not familiar with the grid leak out. On three evenings I had the grid return on the secondary of the second transformer hooked up negative.

"On the fourth evening changed it to positive. Could not see much difference. If anything it seemed a little more ticklish in the adjustment of the detector rheostat. Why should it be positive. (Yes.) I am using a soft doctor tube.

SCIENCE HEARS 'LOUD SPEAKER' WITHOUT HORN

Cincinnati, Dec. 29.—A demonstration of wireless transmission of power was made by Dr. Willis Rodney Whitney, Director of the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company, of Schenectady, before the convention of the American Association for the advancement of Science.

Dr. Whitney lighted an ordinary 110-volt incandescent lamp as if by magic, holding it about a foot from a vacuum tube containing two million cycles of alternating current.

"This comes about as near to the wireless transmission of power as we have yet seen," said Dr. Whitney. "There is no metallic connection between the lamp and source of power—therefore, it must be wireless."

Dr. Whitney produced the two million cycles in his vacuum tube by magnifying the sixty cycles of the ordinary circuit of electricity in the building where the meeting was held. The tube was also exhibited a loud speaker lacking a horn, and showed how it could reproduce the voices of Dr. Whitney and a large disc, about three feet in diameter, stationed at one side of the platform and connected by wires and a vacuum tube with the mouthpiece near the speaker. It did away entirely with the metallic voice associated with amplifying horns.

Dr. Whitney explained that the General Electric Company was attempting to perfect these loud speakers to a point where they could be used in connection with synchronized moving pictures. Should this scheme a lecturer might tour a whole Chautauqua circuit without leaving his own parlor.

He delivers his speech at home, while a moving picture operator snaps his facial expressions. Then a record is made of his speech, the pictures are magnified so that people in the last row can see just how he looked when he delivered it and film and record are shipped all over the country, the speech to be delivered through one of the disc loud speakers.

HOW DOES HORNSBY RATE WITH RUTH?
According to the Cardinals' way of rating players, Rogers Hornsby is worth more in cash and players than Babe Ruth. Baseball fans will never see the day when Rogers will surpass the Bambino as an idol.

EAST BOSTON, B. C. HIGH AND TRADE SCHOOL WIN ON ICE

3 GAMES IN ARENA PLAY OFF

Tie play-off in the Ilsston High School League at the Boston Arena today resulted in East Boston, Boston College High and Trade School being lodged the winners of the three encounters that were played.

East Boston triumphed over South Boston to the tune of 3 to 0; Boston College High had an easy time beating Commerce, 5 to 0, while Trade had the best of Jamaica Plain High and won 2 to 1.

The play was by far a big improvement over that of any shown at the ice palace this year. Though the boys lack ice in which to practice they showed remarkable form and staying power.

The B. C. High sextet played an offensive game in the contest with Commerce. The Back Bay school failed to penetrate the second defense of the Maroon and Gold team once during the fray.

How the teams lined up:

ZEV ONLY FREAK OF TURF, SAY OLD-TIMERS

Just because the Finn sired Zev, three-year-old sensation of the 1923 racing, there has come a mad scramble among fledgling horsemen for the yearlings of Zev's paternal parents.

But veteran owners are not engaging in it. They seem to have the idea that Zev was more of a freak offthrow from the Finn than a positive indication that the Finn is really a great sire.

Then they point to records of the Finn's offsprings which performed in 1923. It is a rather pitiful showing for the sons and daughters of the Finn, when Zev is excluded.

Here it is:

	Age	Sts	1st	2nd	3rd	Money
Zev	3	16	12	1	0	$261,905
Diversity	3	17	7	3	2	1,945
Tuscola	4	18	5	2	1	1,870
Red Lemon	3	7	3	2	1	1,580
Rosetown	3	10	3	1	1	1,270

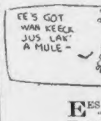
FIVE BOSTON MEN ARE DOG SHOW JUDGES

Eastern Dog Club officials made public the names of twenty-three experts who will act as judges in the twelfth annual show, to be held in Mechanics Building February 21, 22 and 23.



The list includes many of the leading fanciers and breeders in the East. They come from six States and include sportsmen who, in addition to their interest in dogs, are well known in other lines of sport.

Included is George H. Earle, 3d, of Philadelphia, one of the polo players who figured in the international matches at Meadow Brook, L. I., last September.

Five Bostonians are among the judges named. They are Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., polo player and steeplechase rider, who also has been prominent in whippet racing hereabouts; Eliot W. Penault, who will judge French bulldogs; J. Ra—— Thorndike, owner of some of the best Irish terriers the show ring has seen; Michael P. Fahey of South Boston, who will judge Boston terriers, and C. E. Jeffrey, Jr., who will pass on Scottish terriers.

Thorndike and Tuckerman are members of the Eastern Dog Club, as is Morris Kinney of Butler, N. J., who has been selected to judge Great Danes and Old English Sheepdogs.

The club's headquarters from which plans for the show will be completed will be at No. 39 Hunting-ton avenue. The telephone number will be Back Bay 10859. The office will be opened early in January.

Premium lists will be issued about January 7. George F. Foley, as in the past several years, will act as superintendent of the show and persons who desire to reach him before the local offices are opened, may address him at No. 1308 Sansom street, Philadelphia.

More than 1,200 dogs representing fifty-five breeds competed in the show last February, making the event second only to the Westminster Kennel Club Show of New York in importance. An entry list even larger is expected this season. Officials of the club believe that the judges selected are certain to attract representative lists of competitors in every breed.

HOPPE TO TRAIN HERE FOR CUE TITLE PLAY

Champion Willie Hoppe will defend his world's 18.2 balkline title with Walker Cochran in Exhibition Hall, Mechanics Building, January 10, 11 and 12.

The champion will come here in a day or two and will train for the championship match as zealously as ever. He will practice at Sloan's.

Cochran is one of three who have beaten Hoppe in a world's championship 18.2 match or tournament in the last twenty years. From the time he won the 18.2 title, in 1905, up to 1912 Hoppe did not lose a match.

Then he was defeated by Koji Yamada in a most exciting game. The next man to defeat him was Jake Schaefer, Jr., and he gave Willie the worst defeat of his entire career in the final game of the regular tournament in Chicago in 1921, 400 to 24.

He followed that up when he beat Hoppe in the playoff 500 to 346 and then defeated him again in their challenge match in 1922, 1500 to 1233.

Last fall, 1923, Hoppe recovered his stride, won the championship tournament and defeated Schaefer and Roger Conti in challenge matches.

It was a shock when Cochran beat him in the world's championship tournament in New York several weeks ago. That necessitated the playoff, which Hoppe won.

Cochran also beat Schaefer and Edouard Horemans in that tournament.

Cochran, in the final night of the challenge match in Chicago, made 724 points to Hoppe's 600 and averaged just under fifty.

Cochran made 384 points in one inning against Jake Schaefer in a world's championship tournament—the greatest run ever made in championship play at this style of game. Hoppe's run of 307 made in Chicago in 1907 stood for so many years that billiard followers imagined it never would be broken.

Cochran will practice for two or three days in Boston before the match.

"CHARLEY" BUELL ON TRINITY STAFF

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 29.—Charles Chauncey Buell, former Harvard football captain and assistant coach at Harvard University, has been appointed an assistant in the history department of Trinity College. He will assist Professor Edward P. Humphrey, Northern professor of history and political science at Trinity. He will live at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Buell on the Trinity campus.

BOSTON COLLEGE TO TAKE ON PENN STATE

Worcester, Dec. 29.—The Penn State College baseball team will play Holy Cross in Worcester, May 17. The Nittany Lions will play Boston College at Newton.

Boston College will play Penn State at State College, Pa., April 26.

There are twenty-two games on the Penn State schedule, ten of them away from home.

EASTERN HOLDS A SPECIAL MEETING

Springfield, Dec. 29.—D. J. Hayden, president of the Pittsfield club was elected treasurer of the Eastern League at a special meeting held in the Hotel Conley.

He succeeds Clark P. Lane, Jr., of Bridgeport, who held the office since 1918.

The magnates set new opening and closing dates for their 1924 campaign and decided on the opening games and holiday assignments.

After much discussion it was voted that April 23 was the proper date for the opening games.

At the same time they stuck to their determination to cut one week off the twenty-two-week schedule used in 1923 and carried out the intention to close the season September 14. The 154-game program adopted last week stands and this calls for double headers seven times during the year. These double headers, it is said, will be played on the half-holidays—Saturday's excepted—which are observed in some cities.

C. R. EDWARDS FIVE DEFEATS LAFAYETTES

The C. R. Edwards five of the West End House Centre disposed of the Lafayette team at the English High drill hall. The Edwards quintet started their important work in the first half when Klebanow and Krivitzky, the two forwards, shot several pretty baskets from the floor.

The C. R. Edwards team seeks the title of the West End House and also the championship of the teams in the 70-pound class.

Teams desiring games communicate with manager of C. R. Edwards Five, West End House, 45 Chambers street, Boston.

LEWIS JAILED FOR TAKING SOCK AT FAN

Wichita, Kas., Dec. 29.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, champion, heavyweight wrestler, was arrested here last night after his match with Dick Daviscourt on an assault and battery charge on complaint of William Goodell, whom Lewis struck as he was on his way to his dressing room after the first fall.

When the champion left the ring after succumbing to one of Davis court's headlocks, the crowd hooted and booed him. Lewis was taken to the police station and booked, after which Goodell withdrew his charge on learning that the blow was unintentional. Goodell denies he hissed or hooted the champion.

The match went three falls, Davis court winning the first in one hour and six minutes with a headlock and Lewis the other two in four minutes and one minute respectively.

NO CHANGES IN GRID RULES

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 29.—No fundamental changes in football rules seem to be required, according to the report of the rules committee made to the convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association by E. K. Hall of Dartmouth, chairman.

Chairman Hall asserted that in the reports of his committee for the past three years the opinion has been expressed that no fundamental changes in the rules governing football seemed to be required and that nothing in the experience of last season has tended to alter that opinion.

"On the contrary," he continued, "evidence continues to accumulate that the task the committee undertook some years ago of gradually, through the medium of the rules, changing the game of American rugby football from one that was becoming a closed mass formation and probably too hazardous game into an open, running game, free from unnecessary hazards, has been accomplished."

In the change from the old game, he said, practically all that was best in the old game has been preserved and most of the things that came in for just criticism have been eliminated and certain desirable features have been added.

Hall said the committee believed that officials during the past season was better and more men played than ever before.

During the past two seasons, Hall said, there has been a marked tendency on the part of many colleges to open up their schedules and play more strong teams, and that tendency is still more noticeable in the schedules announced for 1924.

RING JUDGES CHECK UPON THE CROOKEDNESS OF REFEREES

CHAMPIONS OBLIGED TO FIGHT

By DAMON RUNYON.

New York, Dec. 29.—You will be interested in reading Charles F. Mathison's views on a phase of the boxing situation that is causing much comment.

Mr Mathison is a veteran sports writer who has of late been serving as judge of boxing contests for the Boxing Commission.

Some of his statements are quite significant. They will arouse much discussion. Some of them will perhaps be hotly disputed. That is why he is interesting.

Read what he says:

"Having been an observer of and writer on boxing for nearly forty years," writes Mathison, "I feel impelled to enter a protest against the suggestion in regard to the assumption of championship rights.

"During the time in which the London prize ring was in force the rule was in vogue that the champion of the world should, when the champion of the United States, defend his title against the latter. This rule was the exception rather than the rule.

DECISIONS APPEARABLE TO GAIN SINCERE REPORTS

"In the New York state put the Frawley law on the books a decision could be appealed to a court of appeals, and the case would be argued before the judges, who would then render a decision based on the law and the evidence.

"The same thing here [illegible] would not only serve to assure a sincere effort on the part of boxers and referees, but would also provide for a verdict by some one [illegible].

"Of course, the New York state method is open to certain objections. For instance, it would serve in order to assure a sincere effort on the part of boxers and referees, but would also provide for a verdict by some one [illegible].

"The writer has been doing [illegible] for a number of years, and he is willing to admit that he is not infallible. And in many instances [illegible] depends on the viewpoint of the individual observer. Human nature is the same today as it was in the past.

"It would be a difficult matter to corrupt two out of three officials, but perhaps an easy matter to reach one man in complete control.

"Now the system of two judges and a referee, used in many states, has been but one chance of corruption, that being the silly yawp of Greb, where a decision against him was unanimous.

CHAMPIONS ALWAYS HAD BEST OF DECISIONS

"A glance at the period when the referee was the sole judge will show a situation of grand larceny. It was practically impossible to get a verdict against a champion if he was alive at the finish. And in many cases when he was unconscious the decision went to him.

"I will mention a few flagrant examples:

"1880—Heenan sent Sayers to grass in nearly every round of 42. Referee left ring in fifth round, and next day he decided it was a draw.

"1885—McCaffery batted John L. Sullivan so that the champion refused to come out of his corner for the 7th round, thus automatically electrifying himself and losing his title. Referee escaped from ring without a decision. Two days later he declared Sullivan the winner.

"In 1900—Oscar Gardner, 'Omaha Kid,' knocked out Terry McGovern, who got a long count from the referee, and then permitted to clutch Gardner about the waist and hold him until the round was ended.

"When McGovern recovered, he floored Gardner, who was counted out. I believe, in seven seconds.

"1900—Chynski floored Kid McCoy near the close of the fourth round. The Kid getting a count of twenty two. As the Kid got to his feet the bell ended the round.

"Chynski dropped his hands and turned to his corner. Kid hit him behind the ear AFTER the bell Chynski, unable to respond to the bell for the next round, was counted out QUICKLY in his corner.

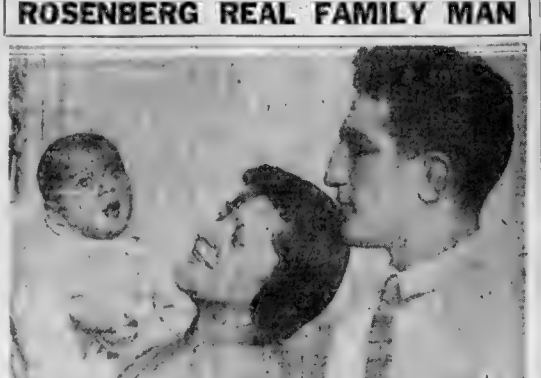
ARE ATTELL PROTECTED BY THE REFEREE.

"In 1906—Tony Ender knocked out Abe Attell in the second round. Abe had five minutes' rest. They boxed a third round. 'No decision,' said the referee.

"1894—Kentucky Rosebud knocked out George Dixon. Decision of the referee was 'merely exhibiting.' It was in a bout in Philadelphia for charity.

"The Milk Fund bouts last Summer were for charity. The decisions stand."

ROSENBERG REAL FAMILY MAN



International News Reel Photo

ROSENBERG WILL GIVE STRIBLING HARD BATTLE

New York, Dec 29—The young Stribling-Dave Rosenberg light-heavyweight tussle which is scheduled for twelve rounds on New Year's Day afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the First Regiment Armory, Newark, will not lack color.

Ma Stribling, who is training her son at Freddy Welsh's health farm in Summit, N. J., has received a license to act as his second while Mike McTigue the world's champion in this class, will be in Rosenberg's corner. As Ma stribling is well acquainted with the finer points of the game the youngster will be well coached. She is especially desirous of being in her boy home a winner because of the presence of McTigue in the rival corner.

Stribling earned his right to be considered a top-notcher by holding the champion to a draw in that much discussed battle at Columbus, Ga. Needless to say there is no love lost between them.

McTigue would like to see Rosenberg send the eighteen-year-old Southerner back to his high school books and will have almost as much interest in Rosenberg as Ma Stribling will have in her boy.

Rosenberg is bent on battling his way back to the top of the pugilistic heap and is conserving no efforts to put himself in the best shape of his career. A victory over the sensational Southerner will mean a lot to the Brooklynite, as Stribling because of his recent winning streak has become a serious contender for titular honors.

* * *

The Willie Woods - Spark Plug Russell semi-final ten rounder speaks for itself. They fought a smashing bout in their last engagement in the Newark armory and the fans are displaying almost as much interest in this go as in the main encounter.

Another ten-rounder, which brings together Harry Martone, Jersey City's knockout king, and Sailor Darden, colored middleweight, of Harlem, has been carded. Martone has compiled a record of eight straight knockouts and the sailor is to attempt to put a period to this string.

* * *

Dave Rosenberg, Brooklyn pugilistic favorite and former middleweight champion of the world is bent on regaining his lost laurels in meeting Young Stribling, the young Southern rocker, in the First Regiment Armory of Newark on New Year's Day at 3 p. m. Dave is a fair way to realizing his ambition, Stribling, since his much-disputed draw with Mike McTigue, lightheavyweight champion, in Columbus Ga., has been winning consistently. His record speaks for itself and if the Brooklynite can register a victory over Stribling he will have negotiated a big jump in his comeback attempt.

Stribling, under the direction of his mother has been finishing up at Freddy Welsh's farm in Summit, N. J. Ma Stribling, who will be in her son's corner, watched her boy go through a workout with Champion Jack Dempsey yesterday afternoon.

* * *

The heavyweight king has been a friend of the family for years and will occupy a ringside seat. That the young Southerner has picked up a few points from the Manassa Mauler goes without saying.

Rosenberg is on the last lap of his training at the Madison Square Garden Gym and he is responsible for the statement that he never was in better condition in his career.

Willie Woods, Scotch flyweight champion who will meet Spark Plug Russell in the ten round semi-final promises to give the Jerseyite a battle the equal of the one they staged in the last act of bouts in the Newark Armory. It was a classic and had the fans on their feet from gong to gong.

* * *

The other ten round batte, which brings Harry Martone of Jersey City into contact with Sailor Darden, Harlem's colored middleweight, of especial interest to Jersey fandom. Martone has registered eight knockouts in as many starts and he has become a riot with the Skeeter ring followers.

TARAMASCHI IS BILLED WITH JOE POLK

A march that will go a step towards naming the Italian championship will be staged at the Grand Opera House Thursday night when Angelo Taramaschi, the strongest bidder for the title, will meet Joe Polk (last name Poggi) in a 10-inch contest.

Joe Polk has appeared here on several occasions. A few weeks ago he wrestled Jim Londos, the then popular Greek star, at Mechanics, and more than held his own.

He has had remarkable success in the West in the past year and has been the most persistent challenger of Renato Gardini and George Calza. Now that Taramaschi has forged to the front, Joe is out after him.

Taramaschi has been troubled with a bad knee for the past six weeks and some fans think he has made a poor showing. He has been an unlucky wrestler since coming to Boston. In his first appearance he was handicapped by the climate. Later he had the knee trouble, and in only one match the one with George Walker, did he display his real form.

Another bout of interest on the card will be a one-fall contest between Jack Albright, the man with the thousand hands, and Cyclone [illegible], the south house German.

The opening bout will be between John Benuett, known as the Russian panther, and Young Saxon of Worcester.

Bennett was formerly a North Andover shoe-boot teacher, who is engaged to marry Mrs. Elizabeth A. Bigelow, the sixty-nine year-old widow of North Leighton.

Bennett has been a physical culture expert for years and has wrestled a lot of amateur bouts. This will be his first professional battle and fans from Fitchburg where he is known in large numbers to see their idol in action.

Joe Alvarez, the Panama champion, who is the first man to score a fall over Stanley Ruzsiak, the Polish Lion, is still in town and intends to camp right in Boston until Sig Sax gives him a return match.

PFANN OF CORNELL TALKS WEST POINT

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 29.—George Pfann, quarterback of the Cornell football team is making preparations to enter West Point next Summer, according to close friends.

It is understood that Pfann, whose home is in Marion, Ohio, has been assured an appointment to the Military Academy if he agrees to accept. He is inclined to look with favor on the idea. Pfann is a senior at Cornell and will be graduated in June.

If he enters West Point he will be eligible for the football team throughout his four year course as the Army does not have the same eligibility rules as are in vogue at most colleges.

READING COMMUNITY OPPOSES WAKEFIELD

The Reading Community Gym will open their basketball season tonight at the Community Gym against the Wakefield All Stars.

Coach Williams has gathered together the best basketball players available and indications point to one of the best aggregations ever to represent the town. Games have been arranged with some of the best teams around Greater Boston. Between the halves the Reading All Stars will oppose the Winthrop Basketball Club.

BUILD STADIUM FOR PEABODY SCHOOL

Peabody, Dec 29 - Ground has been broken for the Peabody High School stadium by Bixby and McKeane, Boston contractors. When completed the stadium, which will be known as the "Tom Bixby Stadium" will seat 10,000 and will contain a football field, baseball field, cinder track and other facilities for pursuit of athletics.

The contract specified that the excavation is to be finished by January 20 and the entire structure in time for the football season next Fall. It will be so built as to allow additional sections to be added as the occasion demands. The stadium is to cost $40,000, the greater part of which has been appropriated by the city.

BAR BATTLING SIKI FROM DETROIT BOUTS

Detroit, Mich., Dec 29.—Lewis W Iles, state boxing commissioner, announces that he will not permit the match between Battling Siki and Cleve Hawkins, veteran negro boxer, scheduled for this city next month.

The commissioner does not regard Hawkins as a suitable opponent for the Senegalese. Iles said it is possible that Siki may not be allowed to fight here at all. Definite decision is being withheld, he said until after the Battling Siki-Joe Lohman match at Grand Rapids New Year's day.

COMMISSIONER GIVES PLAYERS CLEAN BILL

Chicago, Dec. 29—After reports that Wilfred "Roxy" Ryan, the Giants' pitcher; Adolphe Luque, the Reds' hurler, and a number of other major leaguers were playing exhibition matches in Cuba, Commissioner K. M. Landis conducted an investigation and reported the results.

He received word from the New York club that Ryan has not been away from his New England home since the world's series, he said, and earned that Luque's only offense against the rule prohibiting baseball playing after a certain date consisted in playing two games as an outfielder.

Abel Quits Hockey Team

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 29.—Clarence (Taffy) Abel, hockey star on the St. Paul team, has resigned the United States Amateur Hockey Association that he will not make the trip to Europe with the American Olympic team. Although he had agreed to go.

Lynch Meets McArthur

Omaha, Dec. 29.—Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, will meet Earl McArthur of Sioux City, Ia., in a ten-round bout here, January 4.

TOM GIBBONS IN NEW DRIVE FOR DEMPSEY GO

New York, Dec. 29.—If it wasn't for the fact that the boys are just a bit set on going back for the rest of the loose money that Dempsey and Firpo left in New York the last time, it might not be bad business to feed Tom Gibbons some of the Firpo diet, just to see what would happen. Personally, we believe that Gibbons would make the fur bear up either look even worse than he actually is.

Thomas himself declared that he would stop, bait and otherwise discontinue the scrap in a couple of rounds, and asks, among other things, that he be provided with the opportunity. He will not get it.

* * *

The boys are fully aware that the scrap must be preserved, as is, until the harvest moon shines brightly on another Dempsey enterprise, probably on or before July 4, next. They are shooting at a two-million gate this time and that is entirely too many dollars to trifle with. Firpo has one more big fight coming to him and it must be with Dempsey, because the project is one of those formfitting, made-to-your-measure affairs and needs no bally-hoo.

Allowing the scrap to frolic with Gibbons, Harry Wills or any of those rough playmates would be nothing less.

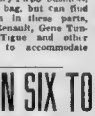
* * *

It is pleasing to note, however, that Gibbons at last has decided to capitalize the fact that he is the only man this side of the Hereafter to stay the limit with Dempsey since the latter became champion. Everything was against Gibbons at Shelby, yet he hurt Dempsey on several occasions and proved that he is uncommonly fast, smart, game and rough. We happen to be one of the innocents who think the Shelby fight was on the absolute plumb-bob level. We also think Gibbons can do it again.

He is stepping out in the general direction of another chance in meeting Dempsey. Gibbons should cut funny Fred down inside of three rounds. The latter, never game, is now as slow as a day laborer's shovel.

After Freddie is picked up, tenderly, and borne away, Gibbons intends to come to New York to see what can be done about the situation. He cannot hope to interfere with the Dempsey-Firpo business, which is in the bag, but can find plenty of action in three parts, provided Jack Kennedy, Gene Tunney, Mike McTigue and other worthies care to accommodate him.

UNICORN SIX TO OPPOSE THE TORONTOS



At the Arena tonight the Toronto University team will play the B. A. A. champions in an international hockey event of importance.

Unless the B. A. A. display better and sounder brand of hockey than it dispayed in the losing games with the Boston Hockey Club and New Haven it looks as if three straight defeats would be chalked up against the wearers of the Unicorn.

Louis Hudson in centre ice gives the collegians a team of veteran attackers. Hudson is a member of the Canadian Olympic team he which probably will face the United States team in France next month for the world's premier hockey honors.

With George Westman on one wing and Ned Wright on the other Toronto will present one of the best trio of attackers that ever played on the Arena ice.

TORONTO BEATS THE EAGLES, 3 TO 1

Canada's premier sextet, represented by the University of Toronto, proved too much for the rather battered Eagle in the first of a three-game hockey series at the Arena. Toronto drew first blood, 3-1.

Jim Foley

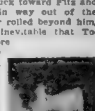
The aggressiveness of the invaders was displayed from the start, although the Eagle was the first to pierce Sullivan's net. The game was only a few seconds old when Foley drove a long one from centre ice. The rubber bounded off the goalie's shin pads, but Groden was there and an easy tap sent the white flag up for the first point.

The rest of the period was dull, Captain Fitz of the Eagles was the only bright spot. The youngster showed his old power and fended off particularly dangerous shots.

The second period opened with as fast a score as has registered by the Eagle in the opener. Hudson, who played a regularly brilliant game throughout, dribbled the disk down the side of the rink and shot safely from an almost impossible angle.

Toronto seemed to be sure of its power, and Fitzie began to bear the brunt of the battle. He made at least a dozen spectacular stops. McLeod took the puck toward Fitz and drew the captain way out of the net. The rubber rolled beyond him, and it seemed inevitable that Toronto would score.

Groden, who had lost his stick, was the only Eagle in striking distance, but this little thing did not bother him in the least. A long dive and a slight scoop sent the puck safely out of the way.



Capt. Fitzgerald

The third period opened with a crash. With the score deadlocked at two teams fought gamely to add a winning pointer. A scrimmage behind B. C.'s goal gave the puck to Wright. The Canadian star passed it to McLeod in front of the goal who scored with ease.

From then on the game was a whirl, with Fitzgerald the busiest man on the ice. Somerville's goal, and the first score of the game was a fluke. Culhane, who had skated behind Fitz net with the puck, lost it short to the rocky centre, who scored on the same swing.

NEW JERSEY SOLONS TO FIGHT TURF BILL

New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 29.—Democratic legislators of New Jersey are opposed to the return of legalized thoroughbred horses racing in this State, Frederick W. Devoe, Democratic minority leader in the Assembly, declared tonight.

Introduction of any bill in the Assembly to obtain the return of the "sport of kings" will be bitterly fought, Devoe said.

The eighteen members who constitute the Democratic minority in the Lower House have determined to maintain unbroken ranks on the matter.

IVAN PARKE LEADS AMERICAN JOCKEYS

New Orleans, Dec. 29.—Track followers figure that Jockey Ivan Parke, now riding at Jefferson Park here, can not be headed for riding honors on the American turf this year.

His nearest competitor, Pete Wells, is twenty-two victories behind him, and only three days more of the year remain.

Parke has piloted 167 winners this year, while Wells, who is riding at Tia Juana, has piloted 145.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Said a prominent man who was a personal friend of President Harding's and is also a personal friend of President Coolidge:

"The difference between evening at the White House with President Harding and one with President Coolidge is, that after dinner with President Harding there often was an adjournment upstairs for a game of poker, but President Coolidge goes to bed every night at 10 o'clock. He gets up at 6."

• • •

"I suppose you had a hand in drawing up the President's message." I remarked to one of those credited with being very close to him.

"What!" he exclaimed. "Why the first intimation I had of what was going into the message was when I read it in print. President Coolidge works differently from what President Harding did. President Harding was such a good natured, easy going approachable soul that anybody and everybody could get to him and induce him to do things for them. The result was that often he took action which had not been advised by the head of the department it affected. Much confusion caused a lot of awkwardness to say the least.

"President Coolidge goes for advice and aid of the department concerned. He is a stickler for constitutional practice. He won't even dream of filling an outsider that he would give him or that or the next order without first consulting with the officer having charge of the matter. He consults a number of cabinet officers individually before calling one of them to make up his mind. President Coolidge has been a delight to work for."

• • •

Owen D. Young, who has been sent by General Dawes to talk to Premier Poincare, to see if he can't persuade France to get out of the Ruhr, was selected Secretary Hughes, I understand, didn't know that—but President Coolidge did. The fact that he is a Democrat was looked upon by the Administration as being a fine selection—and an unfavorable circumstance.

Mr. Young is so accustomed to handling financial affairs on the magnitude of the task he is about to tackle doesn't ever give him.

He will be tremendously interested in Mr. Young remarked to me. "I really don't know any better than you do as to whether we are going to accomplish much or little or nothing. I was much interested in the news reports as far as they went. I am not an expert at anything. As you know, I practised law for years and had a good deal to do with rather important business affairs before I became connected with the General Motors Corporation. I don't look upon myself as an expert at all, but simply as an American citizen who is getting old and anxious to undertake to the best of my humble ability duties which have come to me in a way that could not possibly be foreseen. I regard our mission as one of the very great importance to this country as well as the world at large."

Mr. Young has known personally both General Dawes and Henry M. Robinson, the third delegate. Mr. Robinson, like Mr. Young, was a lawyer who gravitated into business affairs of magnitude, and finally entered the banking field. He is head of one of the very largest banking organizations in the Far West, with headquarters at Los Angeles.

Both Mr. Young and Mr. Robinson are quiet, unassuming, unpretentious gentlemen. They are the very opposite of the blustering type. They function smoothly. Both know how to smile.

The personality and career of General Dawes are well known to the American people, but perhaps it may be interesting to give in this column some day such a short character sketch of the other two members of the mission. I happen to know them both intimately.

Today labor launched another banking institution in New York—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Co-operative Trust Company. Its president is Warren A. Stone, head of the Brotherhood, who has filled the same position with the successful Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' National Bank of Cleveland.

This gives the Brotherhood nine banks in different parts of the country. It also owns a large office building in Cleveland, has a twenty-story office building under construction there, is interested in a coal mine and has an investment company. [illegible]

New York Stocks Show Steady Tone in Last "Short Session" of Old 1923

U. S. STEEL IS AROUND HIGH ON MOVE

New York stocks showed a steady tone in the last "short [illegible]" of old 1922, with U. S. Steel hovering around the high established Friday on the current move.

Corn Products was up nearly 2 points. Houston Oil gained a point, and the market for oils was generally active and strong.

Steels were second in activity and firmness. Rails were quiet with several issues selling higher.

American Aggie pfd. was up better than 2 points. Atlantic Coast Line gained 3 points. Atlantic Refining Advance Rumeley pfd., Rock Island, Central Leather and International Harvester recorded point or better gains.

This was the last day on which sales of stock could be made for establishing income tax losses by the clearance method, though cash sales for such purposes will still be possible on Monday.

"Selling for tax purposes," is the cry of many, but deduction proves on investigation to a large extent fictitious. Most of those using the explanation of tax selling believe that selling is to establish losses which may be deducted from income before making the tax return for 1924.

"But the greater volume of sales is in securities that have been in the lead and are now at or near the high for the year. The true explanation, it is held, is that it is by individuals who believe the turn of the year will mark a wave of profit taking by those who have been holding off from cashing in because if they did so they would be obliged to pay a good part of their profit to the government in taxes."

Prices Are Irregular But Firm in Boston

Prices were irregular but firm in trading on the Boston Stock Exchange for the week-end.

Amoskeag Torrington and Mohawk added point or better gains.

Edison was up fractionally to a new high on the recent move.

Boston & Maine Class B was down a point and the preferred also lowered a point.

There were several trades in New England cotton textiles featured by a decline of six points from Thursday's prices, and contrasted with sales at 24 for the corresponding International Cotton Mills preferred.

New England Telephone reacted from 111 to 110, for a net loss of ½ and was now for the year. Boston & Maine common came abreast of its year's lowest when it dropped from 9 to 8.

St. Paul Issues Find Favor in Bond Market

In New York week-end bond transactions traders continued to bid for the St. Paul issues, gains ranging from fractions to 2 points. Numerous other Western railroad mortgages also found good buying at moderate advances.

While the volume of trading was somewhat restricted, there was evidence, also, of better demand for some of the utility liens and equipment and steel company bonds. Trading in the foreign group was dull, with prices irregular.

LEATHER CONCERNS CHANGE OFICERS

At a meeting of the board of directors of National Leather Company the following changes were made in officers: Geo H Swift elected chairman of the board of directors; W. C. Fisher elected president. Such changes were made in lists of officers of the three following subsidiaries: The Lawrence Leather Company, National Calfskin Company, Winchester Tannery Company.

Elks Take Care of Destitute Cubetos Youngsters

Six little youngsters out in Everett are wishing a Happy New Year to Brookline Lodge of Elks through the American.

The Brookline lodge "came through" for the six Cubetos children in West Everett with twelve suits of warm underwear, twelve pairs of stockings and six pairs of woolen mittens—and five dollars to buy the hungry youngsters milk for two weeks.

Exalted Ruler "Tom" Brady and Charles J. Fay played behind Santa Clauses Thursday when they deposited the above donations in the American office for the destitute kiddies.

N. Y. LABOR BANK WILL HANDLE BAGGAGE

New York, Dec. 20.—The Locomotive Engineers' Co-operative Trust Company, Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue, opened today, marking the ninth invasion of the railmen's union into the banking field throughout the United States and the fourth labor union bank in New York.

Up to the time of opening Warren S. Stone, president of the bank, said 300 applications had been received from persons anxious to get their names on Savings Book No. 1 and nearly as many for Checking Account No. 1.

"If a person wants theatre tickets in a hurry and doesn't want to patronize a 'scalper' a telephone call to us will get him tickets at regular rates, and they'll be delivered to him," he continued. "The same will apply to railway or steamship reservations. We'll do everything, even to having a person's baggage called for and delivered."

"We know what we're backing up against by starting a bank here—with other financial and labor banking interests already firmly intrenched, some of them openly hostile to us," said Mr. Stone. "We're confident, however, that we'll go over."

Mr. Stone said any person could open a checking account in any sum, instead of requiring from $200 up as is asked by most banks.

"We'll pay 4 per cent on savings, compounded quarterly, and 2½ per cent on the daily balance of checking accounts," he said.

RUSSIAN PLAYERS AID SACCO-VANZETTI FUND

Nunia Balanoff, formerly a pupil of the Ostanoff Dramatic School, Petrograd; Fanny Tararikum of the Dramatic Theatre of Moscow, Alexander Ilin, formerly theatrical director of the Nakitsky Theatre in Moscow, and Misha Balanoff, former political prisoner, took the leading roles.

Five more plays in the series will be presented, beginning this afternoon and concluding with a midnight performance New Year's eve.

U. S. MAIL IN IRELAND DELAYED BY STRIKE

Queenstown, Ireland, Dec. 19.—One thousand sacks of American mail brought from New York on the President Polk missed rail connection for Dublin because the porters refused to handle the bags unless their staff of sixteen men was increased to twenty. This the agents of the United States line refused to do and the men quit.

There was a reduction of 94,875 tons in the United Kingdom's sailing tonnage, selling tonnage between June, 1922, and June, 1923, while the world's sailing tonnage had decreased by 1,240,876 tons.

REBEL FORCES NEAR DEFEAT, SAYS OBREGON

New York, Dec. 19.—President Obregon, of Mexico, in a dispatch to William Randolph Hearst, declared the rebel forces are depressed after their repeated defeats. President Obregon's cablegram reads:

"The facts have confirmed my previous messages, for disloyal troops have suffered losses and their morale is completely depressed.

"Yesterday I traveled through the lines from this city to Ga Piedad, State of Michoacan, reviewing the troops that are leaving to fight the rebels in Guadalajara, capital of the State of Jalisco, and I hope that, in a very short time, the rebels will be annihilated by the loyal forces who support and defend our national institutions.

"The faction, headed by De La Huerta, has been making active endeavors to bribe other military chiefs who support honorably have rejected the offers. The De La Huerta faction has been making a campaign of falsehoods by means of the press trying to influence public opinion against the present Mexican Government.

"Last Sunday the government gave absolute freedom to all the prisoners taken by our forces, and a small quota of money was given to them besides to return to their homes.

"Prisoners' report that no truth had reached them; they were only allowed to read the printed sheets that the leaders themselves wrote in Vera Cruz.

"It is necessary that these facts be known by the noble American people who have manifested the treason of the disloyal military chiefs and are rendering their moral help to the government over which I have the honor to preside, which government always has had as its principal purpose the transformation of the illiterate and exploited masses of the Mexican people into worthy citizens, who, once they become emancipated, both economically and intellectually, will form the basis upon which we shall build our future prosperity."

Cox's Good Judgment

Governor, Who Says He Will Retire From Public Life, Has Poise and Self-Control

Governor Cox's announcement that he will retire from public life at the end of his term is interesting.

The career of Channing Cox is illustrative of the success of the faculty of judgment. We suppose that the most distinguishing element in Governor Cox's mentality is his good judgment. Give him time enough, and he rarely makes a mistake of judgment.

And it is unusual that a man who is as nervous as Governor Cox should have the poise and the self-control which enables one so perfectly to exercise judgment. When he retires, he will leave a public space into which several of the more ambitious can push themselves.

In connection with the announcement of Governor Cox's retirement, Mr. Louis A. Coolidge, whose candidacy for the United States Senate has been in the offing for a long time, says something very appropriate. He declares that he will not announce his candidacy for the Senate until the issues of the campaign are made clear, for he regards issues to be more important than personalities.

It has been customary since the development of the Mugwump of Cleveland's day for men to say that they were for the MAN and not for the PARTY or for the PLATFORM. They never knew what they were talking about. No intelligent vote in a national campaign will ever be had until men—after they have secured honest candidates—decide, not between the candidates, but between their platforms.

We ought not to elect temporary MASTERS, but SERVANTS—men obliged to carry out the program which we adopt.

Wait and Greenhalge

Governor Cox has made some very good appointments to the bench recently. His elevation of Judge Wait to the Supreme Court was an important contribution to the strength of that court. Judge Wait was an able lawyer, and distinguished himself on the Superior Court bench.

He is this kind of a judge: A labor union case involving an injunction was tried before him sitting as a single justice in equity in a certain county. The law was on the side of the workingmen and against the employer. Judge Wait sent a note to the clerk of the court with his decision in favor of the workingmen. When the clerk passed the papers down to the attorney for the union to read, he inadvertently passed the note, in which Judge Wait stated that he was enclosing his opinion, and as much as he regretted it, he was obliged to decide for the union.

Now, being intelligent, we cannot help having our economic, social and political prejudices. The best we can do to have a fair bench is to equalize the prejudices as far as we can, by appointing men of all shades of economic, social and political opinions, and at the same time always selecting those men who have character sufficiently judicial to control their prejudices.

The appointment of Frederic B. Greenhalge gives the State the services of another very able lawyer with an exceedingly judicious turn of mind. We venture to predict that no man trying a case before Judge Greenhalge will ever have occasion to regret it.

Able Public Servants

When Homer Loring, of the Commission on Administration and Finance, and Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, "put on the gloves" in the squared circle, the results are certain to be interesting. They are two bear-cats of somewhat different temperaments, but bear-cats just the same. Both of them will be pretty well marked up before either takes the count.

We think they are both able-bodied public servants, well qualified for the jobs that they hold.

There is a man whose enterprises are far flung, indeed, on whose enterprises the sun never sets. There is nothing that he seems to like better than a knockdown fight between any two of his best men. He does not hold black eyes and bloody noses and split lips against any of them. Rather he seems to think them evidence that they are fighting men, which is what he wants.

Sayres and Prohibition

Dr. George C. Sayres, professor at the Harvard Medical School and chairman of the Board of Trustees of the City Hospital, attacked prohibition in an article in the Congregationalist recently.

He admits that the jails have been emptied, but he says that the hospitals have been filled. He means to admit that there have been less drunks, but that those who have been drunk got bad whiskey and had to go to the hospitals to save their lives.

We wonder whether Dr. Sayres was ever for prohibition. It might be interesting if some of the clergymen whom he denounces for their advocacy of prohibition find out whether the good doctor is angry because good liquor is no longer obtainable for anything like the price which sensible men are willing to pay.

Young Lieut. Wood's 'Luck'

Fools Will Try to Imitate It

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

Young Lieutenant Wood, twenty-six-year-old son of General Wood, Governor in the Philippines, in one year has made $800,000 in Wall Street speculation, and thinks he will withdraw from the army.

The War Department suggests that speculation might be embarrassing to General Wood. It might.

Thousands will now start stock gambling without young Wood's special sources of information and judgment.

It might warn the gamblers if they could see a list of several hundred stocks, practically all worthless, soon to be sold at auction for anything that they will bring.

The trouble is that only experience will cure a gambler—and that not often.

Will Your Widow Dress as Well as Your Wife?

THE life insurance agent's activities, his representations to his clients, the contracts he sells, are all under the careful supervision of executive officers, likewise trained and experienced in the business he represents.

The conduct of these officers is, in turn, supervised by Governmental officials acting under provisions of law designed to protect the interests of the policyholders. These officers are also controlled by boards of trustees or directors, who, in turn, are subject to law and are held legally responsible for their conduct by supervising government officials who periodically examine all their acts.

Hard to Get Along

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a widow with no means of support and it is pretty hard to get along. I have a little boy four years old, who takes a five-year size. He has no clothing to his name except two pairs of overalls. I take size 36.

MRS. G. V. C.

Generous With Help

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the name and address of someone who can use the articles listed below. Will you also send me the name and address of the woman who has two children, one two and one three, and expects another, and a husband in a hospital for cancer of the throat. I think I can get some baby clothes for her, and I would be glad to make some things for the other children.

A. C. S.

Thank you for the nice list and the other offer. You have been sent the address of Mrs E. V., who can find good use for the clothing you mention, and also of Mrs. C. S. E., who is the other woman you wanted to help.

Boy Asks for Sweater

Editor Helping Hand:

I hope there will be an extra sweater and overcoat for me that someone can spare that will fit a small boy of my age. I am eleven and take a 12½ neck in waists and a two chcs. My daddy is dead and my mother has worked just two weeks in three months, and now she is home again.

Quite Satisfied

Editor Boston American:

It is hardly probable that there are any children in the family of "Simply Disgusted," for if there were any she would know how pleased some members of the family are with the daily comic sheet. In our family there is an instant grab for that particular section, and as for myself it suits fine. I can go ahead with the rest of the news and then take that colored comic section, when the rest of the family have finished, and browse over it contentedly. I'm sure it is an easy to find the magazine section there as anywhere, and then when everyone in our family has perused it thoroughly it is so handy to put away to send on to another family of children who live in the country in another State

"QUITE SATISFIED."

No Use for "Funnies"

Editor Boston American:

Yes, do put the magazine page back in the body of the paper. Personally I've no use for the "funnies." I don't see anything funny about them, they are too disgusting, and I think the children would be better off if they didn't read such stuff. However, I say "everyone to his own liking," but I can't read the magazine page on the car now for I'm ashamed to handle the funny section in public for fear some one will notice and think I'm reading the "funnies."

MOTHER OF FOUR.

Husband Unable to Work

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young mother of four small children, three girls and one boy, the oldest four years, and the youngest two months old. My husband is a disabled World War veteran, being unable to work and receiving only soldier's relief, as his disability has not yet been granted by the Veterans' Bureau. The children need clothing badly, and I would appreciate anything in this line. My husband also needs clothes. He wears size 38 or 40, and size 8 shoes.

Heavy and Warm Coat

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a few things I would like to give to some needy family. I have a coat for a woman, size 3, and a fur and a suit coat. They are in good condition, and the big coat is heavy and warm. Please send some address and I will help them all I can.

NEW HAMPSHIRE HELPER.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs W. F., who will be very grateful, especially for the warm coat.

Thanks Readers

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing you a note of thanks. You and those kind readers certainly helped me out a lot when everything looked dark. I wrote to Miss A. E. L. as you suggested, and this morning I received a ten dollar check. It came when I had nothing but a nickel in the world. Believe me, that little piece of paper looked pretty good to me. My husband has gone away to a sanitarium, where he will be for a year.

Thanks for $10 Check

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you kindly thank through your column the anonymous giver of the check for ten dollars which I received Christmas. If that giver could only know the good it did and see personally the joy of those little ones. Although I was myself very sick Christmas, I managed to make a warm room and a few little toys, and it it had been a million, it could not have made us happier. I know God will reward the giver. It is hard to thank a person you don't know personally, but if this will reach him I will be satisfied.

Words from the Lips of Wise Thinkers

THERE are three difficulties in authorship—to write anything worth the publishing, to find honest men to publish it, and to get sensible men to read it.

* * *

If you want to be miserable, think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, and what people think of you

* * *

* * *

We learn wisdom from failure much more than from success. We often discover what will do by finding out what will not do, and probably he who never made a mistake never made a discovery.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON TEXT: "IT IS I; BE NOT AFRAID"

FOR nobody knows how many thousand or million years the race of man has inhabited the planet.

Ever since the human animal stood up and began to think he has suspected another Thinker in the universe.

Living amidst constant dangers, as all life implies danger—and his, being the highest form of life, meant the most complicated dangers—he early got the idea that the Other Thinker was hostile to him.

He also supposed that being mysterious, unknown and unvocal, this Other Thinker was superior. He must be immensely clever to hide so well.

Hence his first religion was one of placation. Altar fires gleam farther in the past than the remotest history. He killed the first of his flocks to appease the wrath of this Unseen Enemy.

History has been the record of the slow conquest, one by one, of the dreads of the Unknown.

Man's Zig-Zag Path

Fire was first known from volcanoes, whose rumblings were the muttered anger, whose fearful lava was the eructations of the Sullen One

By and by man learned to make Fire himself, from flint, from wood, from chemicals, and his chilade of progress have but marked his progress from trembling before the Volcano to cooking his pancakes over the kitchen stove.

That Other One dwelt in the dim seas, and frightened all navigators, until Columbus.

It was that Other One who made all forests fearsome and caused the terror of the "bois sacre."

Fear multiplied His minions. Under Him, and actuated by His same spite toward human happiness, were countless witches, demons, imps, sprites, fauns, dryads, leprechauns, gnomes and elves.

The path of man, from his mother's breast to the breast of earth, was one zig-zag way of side-stepping the great Detective who was after him, and whose relentless pursuit no son of man had ever been able to escape.

Well to Propitiate HIM

He pulled down monarchs from their thrones, unseated conquerors in full cry of victory, snatched the laughing baby from its father's hand, tore the bridegroom ruthlessly from his beloved's side, and now and again let loose His bloodhounds and slew the hated human race in war by hundreds and by thousands.

No wonder it were well to propitiate Him, to spend one's whole life in mortification and prayer to avert His wrath, to prostitute one's mind to believe the most childish credulities, to give assent to ferocious creeds—to do anything that might turn aside so vindictive and so powerful a Being.

And then, one day, He appeared. And He was so strange that men could not believe Him. He came unto His own and His own received Him not.

For the simplicity of His message was beyond all credence, and insulted the traditions of ten thousand years.

For when that Other One came, He only went about doing good, took little children in His lap and blessed them, healed the sick, spoke peacefully to the troubled, made the blind to see and spoke such gentle words of wisdom that the whole earth trembled

All He said, when He showed His face, all that Other One said, whom humanity had feared so many centuries, was this shattering word.

"It is I. Be not afraid."

HOWARD, GREATEST BUG DETECTIVE

By Herbert Kaufman

FRANCE tells us that Dr. E. O. Howard, chief of the United States Bureau of Entomology, is one of the most useful persons on earth. His salary doesn't say so.

Here's a big sleuth whose endeavors have saved local farmers and ranchers at least a billion dollars annually.

Private corporations pay individuals of far less worth more in a single year than Howard's lifetime earnings.

Except for his efforts, national losses from cattle-tick, boll weevil and fruit scale would be a hundred per cent. higher, and, as it is, these blighters have piled up a twenty-year board bill exceeding the Treasury debt.

Science is decidedly without honor on our side of the Atlantic

Europe, canner judge of human values, donates Nobel prizes and makes liberal grants for faithful social servants.

Over here we hire official geniuses at bricklayers' wages and turn 'em adrift in their penniless old age. For a first-class ingrate, pick a republic.

Their Father's Shoes Pinched Too Much

Small wonder that Osborne Wood began to itch for a competence while still at prep school. Dignities and shoulder straps hardly interest a youngster who cuts his wisdom teeth on a chronically restricted budget.

Army officers' sons, like ministers' children, seldom aspire to step into parental shoes. They pinch too tightly.

One explanation for dwindling church attendance is the penurious policy of congregations. Man cannot live by zeal alone. Successful laborers will be found in the Lord's vineyard the instant proper hire is offered.

Even pastors owe reasonable comfort and opportunity to their families. Which mainly accounts for the painful absence of impressive personalities in American pulpits.

Spirituality must be warmed by $16 coal as well as the flame within.

Safe From Quixotic Lances

Various uplift bodies, now planning a concerted movement for placing the movies under Uncle Sam's guidance, should devote their means and energies to the above practical cause. They're tilting at windmills in any attempt to federally regulate the picture industry.

Reform also lifts a crowned head in Siam and promptly ducks at the threat of revolution. The new king's theories are too radical for his subjects.

Lower Asia is not yet ready for royal monogomy. Polygamous nobles and commoners warn their monarch that he must maintain a customary harem of one thousand wives or abdicate.

They don't intend to let His Majesty set an example that may later spread, by compulsion, to private multiple fireside.

STELLA DALLAS By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. They visit a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison. The story now goes back to the marriage of Stephen and Stella at Milhampton. Stella starts a flirtation with Alfred Munn. The leading women of the town begin to drop her. Stephen, deciding he can never go back to her, starts a divorce suit.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY

Author of "Bobbie, General Manager," "The Fifth Wheel," "The Star in the Window," Etc.

MR. MORLEY SMITH'S sneer deepened. "That's right. You're acting consistently. It's quite the right tack—surprise, indignation, rage, tears, confession finally. Mrs. Dallas, allow me to spare you further attempt at evasion. I have facts—unalterable, unescapable facts. You were seen." He lowered his voice. "You were seen at Belcher's Beach," he brought out.

"Well, what of that?" flashed Stella.

"You were seen at the boarding-house, with Munn," he added, still keeping his sword-pointed eyes upon Stella.

Oh, so that was it! That was why there was no room for Laural at Miss Fillbrown's! That was why the proprietor at the King Arthur had routed her apartment.

"Oh, what a rotten, rotten world!" she exclaimed.

Mr. Morley Smith shrugged and looked away. There was a silence. Then, "Well, you understand me now, I think. You have your choice. Think it over. Either the generous escape Mr. Dallas offers, or the public exposure of acts you have taken such pains heretofore to conceal and cover up."

Stella stared at Mr. Morley Smith speechless, helpless for a moment. Every word go uttered, every glance of his eyes, every pharisaical shrug of his shoulders shamed and degraded her. She would simply have to get out of his presence, or she would do something unladylike, like a cur or a skunk. She stood up.

"I'm going," she said.

He stood up, too. He smiled.

"You will co-operate with us, then? You will accept our proposition?"

"Co-operate? Accept your proposition? No, I won't. I'll fight! That's what I'll do. I'll prove to the world whether I'm guilty or not of the filthy things rotten-minded people have said about me. And I'm glad of the chance, too. I hope Stephen will sue me for a divorce. I didn't need a lawyer, when I first came here, but I need somebody to defend me against such a pack of muck-rakers.

"Why, Mr. Smith, I have no more done the things you come here and accuse me of doing than your own wife, or, if you're not married, your own mother, or the woman you honor the most in this world, whether it is, and I'll get the best lawyer in this country to prove it."

Behind the belying paint and elaborate make-up the white image of this woman's innocence stood out before Morley Smith clear and defined, for an instant, like a white sailed ship when the fog lifts a moment—a white-sailed ship in distress. He saw it. He recognized it. He turned away from it.

"You're going through the usual motions, Mrs. Dallas," he commented with another sneer.

The same chaste charm that pervaded Helen Morrison's Summer home was even more striking in her New York house. A feeling of space and fresh air is more of a triumph in the city than in the country. In both Helen Morrison's houses there was delicious freedom from deleterious overcrowding of possessions beneath a roof. She knew how to make walls backgrounds, instead of boundaries, as unconfining as the sky behind a mountain, or the sea behind a sail.

Yet neither of her houses could be called large. Much as nature conforms itself equally happily to

Mrs. Morrison had a nice sense of harmony decorating a mountain-side, or a salt-water pool no larger than a baptismal font, so Helen contrived herself instinctively to whatever proportions were offered her. Never for the sake of displaying some beautiful work of art would Helen disturb the nice equilibrium and fine composition of a room. Never were the space and air necessary for the spiritual well-being, as it were, of one rare treasure robbed for another.

She possessed a nice sense of harmony, too. She could no more have placed Tiffany glass beside old luster than have mixed people of discordant instincts at her dinner-table. This discernment was not acquired. It was as effortless with her as breathing.

When she married Cornelius Morrison and came as a very young bride to the New York house, filled with its chaotic collection of treasures picked up from all over the globe, not only by her widely traveled husband, but by his father before him, she felt little of the delight which beautiful things had given her before. On the contrary, she was possessed of an incessant desire to escape them, to get outdoors, and breathe deep, and look upon broad spaces.

Finally she asked her husband if he would object if she cleared out just one of the rooms in the house of every single thing that was in it. He told her she could clean out the whole house, for since Cornelius Morrison had obtained her, his other treasures had sunk into trivial insignificance. Therefore Helen Morrison had had the entire top floor of the house built into a single room which she called the museum, and into which she moved the wealth of two generations of collectors.

Feeling of Displeasure

Cleisonne no longer raised shoulders with Copenhagen in the Morrison drawing room, nor futurist touched frames with early Italian. Such jarring juxtapositions gave Helen somewhat the same feeling of displeasure that a discord on the piano gives to a sensitively musical child when he is still too young to understand why.

Helen Morrison could understand her recoil but imperfectly. She knew little about schools and periods and values in art in the various forms when she married Cornelius Morrison. She warned her husband that she was an expert judge concerning only the merits of table-linen, lingerie, and flat-irons. But he soon discovered that if an article was really fine and genuine his wife recognized it and responded to it. He made a repertoire of the museum without hesitation.

Undeservedly the Museum, Cornelius Morrison's house was like a barn at first. At least so the aunt who had lived with Cornelius before he married told Helen, when she saw it.

Helen had exclaimed, "Isn't it? All beautiful space and shadows, and room enough to dance a spring song in, if you feel like it."

The house didn't remain long like an empty barn, however, though according to the aunt it never seemed "like a really furnished house."

Helen spent hours browsing in the Museum, assimilating it slowly, piece by piece. Gradually various treasures began appearing in the rooms below. When Helen discovered, or believed she had, an affinity between some empty niche downstairs and one of the objects of art in the Museum, she united them with delight.

Many Proved Permanent

"Trial marriages," she called them humorously to her husband. Many of them proved permanent, but there were certain corners, tables, old chests, and secretaries, "that enjoyed a constant state of polygamy," she laughed, "that adjusted themselves happily to various of the temperamental objects of art in the Museum."

You never can't be sure what would be the dominant note in the long room with the old-ivory tinted walls in the front of the house. This room was Helen's own. Here she changed the ornaments as she would the flowers, with every changing season and mood. Therefore there were few of the objects of value in the Museum that, one time or another, didn't descend to the rooms below.

Cornelius Morrison discovered his collection all over again. As Helen isolated one piece of it after another and placed it in a sympathetic environment he was constantly finding new beauties in form and line and color, heretofore unseen. He had not the least that he had never enjoyed his collection until Helen came with her unerring intuition, she gave it new birth. Helen gave new birth to everything he possessed. He told her that she gave new birth to him, too.

What Is the Effect Upon the Two, and Especially Upon Their Strange and Beautiful Child Laurel?

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"One writes well only of what he has seen or suffered."

An author, in order to write with conviction, must draw on his own experience, declared the French novelist, Edmond de Goncourt. In one of his novels, even as Ruth Gregory was in hers.

I wondered if it would make any difference to Jeannie and Jim.

Betty, Ralph Lacy, Park and I went ahead to make sure of a table at the roof garden where we were adjourning from Betty's impromptu dinner party. And Mr. Stanley went over to the smartest section of the East Side to call for his sister, Mrs. Lorraine Thurlow, the beautiful society leader who is as well known for her charities as for her leadership of the most exclusive set in town.

When we got to the roof, Park secured an excellent table from which we could watch the dancers while enjoying a wonderful house. At a near table I noticed the Count Sidiski and Gracia MacAvey.

There were two empty places. With pounding heart, I wondered if when the dancers disentangled themselves from the great, whirling mass on the floor those two places would be occupied by Jim and Ruth Gregory.

Betty, noting that I was distrait, claimed my attention.

Never Goes to Hotels

"Anne, dear," she said, "I wonder if you realize what a compliment it is to you and Ralph that Peter Stanley's putting himself out like this to have you meet Lorraine Thurlow. She never goes to hotels. She has always worn gray and mauve and lavender since her boy sweetheart died six months after her marriage. And she has always conducted her life quietly and in the privacy of homes and clubs.

"She must be over forty now and it's more than twenty years since Grigsby Thurlow died on their honeymoon around the world. Lorraine's hair was white at twenty and her manner was grande dame then. It's as beautiful as she is now."

"Gosh and jumping jehosaphat, how I had a crush on that woman when I was about fourteen!" laughed Park. "But Lorraine could have had a couple of thrones if she had been willing to look at either princeling. And there are a few millionaires and diplomats and great explorers and things on their knees before her now. But Madame Thurlow goes her serene way, crowning the few folks who matter to her, with invitations to her home. She supports a dozen charities and has made a lot of struggling musicians and artists. I call her the most important figure in American society, don't you, Betty?"

Reminiscences.

"I was sent to interview her once when I was a cub reporter. Of course she won't remember," smiled Ralph reminiscently. "But it was a scorcher of a day and I had to walk because I couldn't turn in my expense account ahead and I had only a quarter for my dinner. I must have looked tired or done-in or something, for I suddenly found myself partaking of iced tea.

"After I got out with a peach of an interview about a working girl's home Mrs. Thurlow was trying to help. I realized that I'd had a dozen sandwiches and a lot of hot buttered toast and a few slices of chocolate cake and that I didn't need any dinner. I wonder if she knew I was starved."

"She probably did," laughed Park.

"Mrs. Thurlow evidently is not a snob," I commented bitterly, thinking of the Harvison failure which had caused me so much anguish.

"A snob?" said Ralph. "Patrician like you girls and Mrs. Thurlow never are."

But I said nothing. The music had stopped. The dancers were returning to their tables. I hadn't been able to distinguish figures on the crowded floor. But I realized that in another moment I might need all the poise at my command. Mrs. MacAvey and Count Sidiski hadn't caught sight of us.

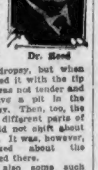
SECRETS OF HEALTH

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

IF YOU are a woman you have five times more interest in this story than if you are a man.

That is the proportionate occurrence of the disease in the two sexes.



Dr. Reed

It was not recognized as a disease until 1873. Then a woman went to her physician, Dr. Gull, complaining of a mysterious swelling beneath the skin. It looked like dropsy, but when the doctor pressed with the tip of his finger it was not tender and he did not leave a pit in the flesh as in dropsy. Then, too, the swelling was in different parts of the body and did not shift about like dropsy does. It was, however, especially marked about the cheeks and stayed there.

There were also some such swellings about the neck just above the collar bones. The tongue was enlarged. The patient was hoarse, her skin was dry and sallow and her nails brittle. She had grown heavier, her temperature was below normal, she seemed sluggish, without interest in anything in particular, and showed a tendency to sleep.

Then came another and still another case of the same kind, but each differing from the other in some particular.

Dr. Gull reported them as representing a new type of disease which was later called myxedema.

About that time Dr. Kocher, of Berne, was removing goiters—enlarged thyroid glands—from many women.

From this it was logically inferred that the mysterious disease, myxedema, was caused by some failure of the thyroid gland to play its part in the human organism.

This conclusion seemed so logical that Sir Victor Horsely, in England, felt justified in going a step farther, and he accordingly took a piece of normal thyroid gland from a lamb and grafted it into the body of the patient with myxedema.

The myxedema was promptly relieved!

That showed that there was something in the thyroid gland that had a powerful influence on nutrition and that could be controlled for the correction of the error of nutrition present in myxedema.

But to procure fresh glands from animals and to get them safely grafted into the bodies of these patients was always difficult, sometimes impracticable, and if not carefully done was dangerous.

Then Murray found a way to extract this something now known as thyroid extract from the thyroid gland so that it could be preserved indefinitely and could be administered to these cases like any other remedy.

Formerly they were entirely hopeless. Now they are successfully treated by this powerful remedy which, however, is a remedy so powerful that it must be given carefully and only under professional supervision.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

ONE of the most unpopular pests in this country is the fellow who always calls on you at dinner time.

HE arrives armed to the teeth with excuses and an appetite.

HE makes it clear that he didn't come for anything to eat, but the minute you announce dinner he's the first one in the dining room.

AND the way most of these pests eat you'd think they were just breaking a hunger strike.

HE always likes to go home with a man who has indigestion.

HE figures that where there's indigestion there's bound to be food.

IT'S cheaper to buy digestive tablets than it is to eat in restaurants.

IT wouldn't do you any good to have dinner at five, because once he got wise to it he'd arrive an hour earlier.

HE very seldom works, so no matter what time you have supper it's always convenient to him.

THERE are hundreds of preparations on the market for keeping flies, ants and mice out of your house, but what we need most is a remedy for getting rid of the worst one of the bunch, the dinner time pest.

ONCE-OVERS

TAKE THOUGHT OF THE FUTURE, BECAUSE IT IS SURE TO COME.

Some writer has said that if you follow the crowd you will head the procession when it turns around, but you will not be going anywhere.

Are you following the crowd?

Are you following the procession of bread-earners and making only just enough to live on, with no surplus?

What is your terminal?

What are you going to have in the end, if you go along as you do at present?

You know that you are not making any headway toward an old-age fund, and, at times, you become quite alarmed about it, but you do want to swing along with the crowd.

If you can find out any way to protect your latter days, do not consult the crowd, but drop the crowd if its friendship stands in the way of future success and comfort.

I was requested to play the wedding march for a friend in a country village church. Seated at the organ I waited, as did the guests, for the arrival of the wedding party. After ten minutes had passed I diverted my attention to the hymnal near me, glancing over the pages. Imagine how embarrassed I was when looking up, I perceived the bride and her brother already near the altar.
